CHAPTER 8

IT WAS quiet in the sun room. The limbs of an unseen tree rustled, sighed faintly under the caress of some light, wandering wind.

A fragment of music drifted into the night. Somewhere, near at hand, an auto purred deeply and was still.

Sheila heard these irrelevant sounds as if they were part of a dream. But she could not question the reality of Brad's kisses, nor of his arms, cradling her against their stormy intensity.

She hadn't expected anything like this. It was bewildering. But . . . it was alarming, too.

She placed soft fingers against his lips. Then panic seized her.

"Please," she breathed, thrusting his seeking hands away. "Be sensible Brad."

He laughed.

"Sensible? Good Lord, Sheila, what do you think I am?"

She gave up struggling, but her lips were unresponsive now, her flesh, silent, lifeless.

After awhile, he let her go.

"That's how you feel, is it? And yet—you didn't seem to —at first."

Sheila's cheeks were flaming. She drew deep breaths of

Torch Killer Refuses to Save Son

EXCLUSIVE!

(Copyright, 1938, by Boston Evening American)

Frank DiStasio, refusing to aid in a last, desperate move to save himself and his son, Anthony, from death in the electric chair, today placed their fate "in the hands of God."

Apparently resigned to his execution, the elder DiStasio rejected his counsel's request to sign a petition asking the governor and the executive council to commute Anthony's sentence, it was learned exclusively by the Boston Evening American.

REVEALS BITTER FEUD

His dramatic refusal bared a growing feud between the condemned father and his doomed son.

Granting of the petition would in all probability have saved his own life as well, observers said, but the father told Attorney William H. Scharton:

"I can do nothing. It is in the hands of God!"

Referring to his impending execution, the elder DiStasio declared:

"I did not kill a man. I did not burn an automobile. I did not enter into any plan to get money from my insurance.

"I had my insurance for $2500 in one company on which I borrowed $1000. I had a death-accident policy for $5000, and my son

5 Industrial Chiefs Go to White House

Parley on Business Slump Called by President

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11—President Roosevelt asked five industrial chieftains to confer with him at the White House late today on the business recession.

Those invited for a 5 o'clock conference in the President's study are:

Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of the board of General Motors Corporation.

Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the board of the National Steel Corporation.

Lewis Brown, president of Johns-Manville.

SEEK REVIVAL

M. W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Colby Chester, head of the General Foods Corporation.

White House officials said the meeting, largest of its kind since the President, in his message to Congress, urged co-operation of business, agriculture and labor in combating the slump, would discuss the economic situation generally, and how to improve it.

Private power utility executives said after an earlier White House conference that President Roosevelt had agreed with them that duplication of transmission and distribution facilities should be avoided.

ENCOURAGE CONSTRUCTION

The executives told reporters the greater part of the conference was devoted to this phase, although they said they stressed the importance of creating "investor confidence" in utilities to encourage new construction.

The conferees said they told the President the utilities had had difficulty obtaining "junior money" for such expansion.

Those who saw the President this morning were Daniel C. Green of the Central Service Corporation, Chicago; John Carpentier of the Texas Power & Light Company, Dallas, and A. B. West, president of the Nevada-California Electric Corporation.

Wife 'Swap' Is Bared in Salem Suit

SALEM, Jan. 11—Sensational stories of how two young Topsfield couples exchanged partners, allegedly for mutual agreement, and how one wife calmly practiced upon the typewriter while her husband was upstairs in the arms of the "other woman" were bared today in a double divorce suit in probate court.

Names as co-respondent in the suit of Calvin M. Watson, Topsfield tree surgeon, against Estelle Watson, was Raymond E. Lee, employe of the Salem Gas & Electric Light Company.

In turn, Estelle Watson was named co-respondent in Mrs. Edyth E. Lee's suit against Raymond. In each case divorce was asked on grounds of infidelity.

Basis of the Watson suit was a raid staged on the Watson home last April 6 by private detectives employed by Watson.

Frederick Caulfis, apprentice sleuth from Saugus, told of standing on a ladder and peering through a pinhole in the window shade of Mrs. Watson's bedroom in quest of evidence against her and Lee.

His employer, Detective William Quinn of Salem, and Mrs. Quinn

WASHINGTON—The days of martial pomp and circumstance are about numbered for Harry Woodring. The genial, bespectacled little Kansan is going to have to move his ornate office from the State, War and Navy Building to dingy, makeshift quarters.

[illegible]ial, much more important, the [illegible]se is soon approaching when he [illegible]ll resign altogether as Secretary of War.

The movement of Woodring's [illegible]fice is entirely distinct from his [illegible]equation, but it may be sym[illegible]tical.

For years the War Department [illegible]s dared offices with the State Department in the same building [illegible]n the offices of the Secretary [illegible]ve done in ornate gold leaf, [illegible]ed with old marble fireplaces and mirror, was just around [illegible]e corridor from the Secretary of State. The office reeks with mouldy dignity, and has the additional advantage of being just across the street from the White House.

From this sanctum recent Secretaries of War have refused to move—even though the expanding State Department needed more space. Now the President has intervened personally and ordered Woodring to pack up and exit.

Woodring's resignation has not been so curt an order. "A definite understanding" is the more correct phraseology. He is to hand in his

Woman Is Killed In Strange Leap

When Frank Burke, manager of a store in Washington street, Roxbury, saw a woman standing at the grocery counter today, he became suspicious and called police.

When he sought to question the woman she ran upstairs to the women's washroom.

Burke sent a salesgirl, Mary Clark, Vernon street, Roxbury, after her. Miss Clark entered the washroom. The woman wasn't there. The window stood open.

Looking out, Miss Clark saw the woman lying on the sidewalk in Goldsmith street.

Police took her to City Hospital, where she died.

Jane Wyman, Film Star, Under Knife

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 11 (INS)—Jane Wyman, popular Warner Brothers actress, was recovering today from an emergency appendicitis operation.

The young star, wife of Myron C. Futterman, dress manufacturer, was rushed to the hospital by her physician, Dr. Robert L. Blackman, who said she would recover rapidly.

Ice Break Traps Big Truck

While children and other horrified spectators looked on, a Metropolitan District Commission truck, clearing off the ice-skating lagoon of the Charles river at the foot of Exeter street, Back Bay, suddenly crashed through the ice and disappeared into 12 feet of water today.

The driver, Eugene Testa, 42, of Billerica, had no warning, no chance to escape. In his enclosed cab, he was carried down with the truck, and was drowned.

Fire apparatus as well as police were summoned by Policeman John T. Quinn, who witnessed the accident. Fire ladders were laid out over the ice, and firemen with pikes crawled out to where the truck had broken through.

It was necessary for the firemen to break the glass in the cab in order to get at Testa's body with grappling hooks.

Witnesses told police that there were two trucks working on the ice, smoothing it down for skaters. One truck moved ahead of that driven by Testa. The first truck passed over the ice safely, but Testa's truck broke through.

Police found the ice around the spot was six inches thick. Testa was driving a one and one-half ton truck.

Cardozo Reported 'A Trifle Weaker'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (AP)—Dr. John Paul Earnest, Jr., said today that Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo is "holding his own, although a trifle weaker than last night." Justice Cardozo, who has been absent from the bench of the Supreme Court for a month, recently suffered severe heart attacks.

Byrnes Blasts Lynch Bill As Filibuster Takes 5th Day

Barkley Promises Sessions Until Action Results

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (AP)—Senator Byrnes (D.) of South Carolina, continuing the steady attack from the South on the antilynching bill, charged in the Senate today it would "arouse ill-feeling between sections."

The filibuster against the bill, going into its fifth day, drew from Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, a reiteration of his intention to hold later Senate sessions until there is action on the measure. The leader added, however, he had not decided definitely whether to hold night meetings.

Byrnes, taking the floor when the Senate convened, asserted there "has been a steady decline in lynching for 10 years."

8 LYNCHED IN 1937

"Out of 130,000,000 people in this country," he continued, "only eight were lynched during 1937."

The South Carolina senator spoke of "outrages" he said the South had suffered at the hands of "carpetbaggers and scalawags" during the reconstruction period and said this made it necessary for Southerners to "take the law into their own hands."

Now, he said, lynching is rapidly declining, but some legislators nevertheless want to "destroy the power of the states" with the antilynching bill.

"Can one forget the record of the United States government in enforcement of the national prohibition law?" Byrnes demanded, expressing doubt that the antilynching measure could be enforced.

AGREEMENT ON WHEAT

A joint congressional committee, meanwhile, reported agreement on wheat provisions of the "ever-normal granary" program.

Senator Pope (D.) of Idaho, a committee member, said the wheat agreement was a "fair, direct compromise" between the separate bills passed by the House and Senate.

Under it the program will aim at keeping wheat supplies equal to average annual domestic consumption and exports for the past 10 years, plus a reserve of 10 per cent of these.

New Handkerchief Wage Set by U. S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (AP)—Secretary of Labor Perkins fixed today a minimum wage of $14 a week and a maximum work week of 40 hours as a requirement in filling government contracts of $10,000 or more in the handkerchief industry. The ruling, effective January 26, was made under provisions of the Walsh-Healy government contract act.

General Johnson Says:

HOMER CUMMINGS Has Excellent Record

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 11—The annual report of the Attorney General is a constructive record—not only in its recommendations for the future, but in the relation of what the Department of Justice has done in the past year.

HUGH S. JOHNSON

Of course, the record for Edgar Hoover's F. B. I., is known to everybody. The work it has done in crime suppression is a major accomplishment and the work it proposes to do in crime prevention is a matter of national concern of first magnitude.

While it is true that Mr. Cummings did not appoint Mr. Hoover, and that the latter's work is his own, yet the Attorney General insisted on his retention and has supported him in his magnificent efforts.

If Homer Cummings' plans are carried through, he will lay down the administration of federal justice in far better condition than he took it up.

His principal recommendations are (1) for complete procedural reform, simplifying and speeding the archaic rules of practice in the Federal Courts, (2) the appointment of a sufficient number of additional judges to insure that none of the present heartbreaking judicial delays continue for want of proper manning of the bench, (3) the creation of an administrative and fiscal overseer for the whole judicial system under the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Taken together, these three accomplishments would work a beneficent revolution in Federal Court procedure.

The latter, I think, is of the utmost importance. After all, the administration of justice is a business. The planning and conduct of it is not a judicial function. It is a purely executive or managerial job.

It seems simply incredible that the vast sprawling court system has for so long had no managerial department to plan and speed and supervise this mechanical aspect of its work. Such supervision, as there has been, is now in a conference of circuit judges and in the Department of Justice.

The attorney-general, pleading for the United States, is the principal litigant before these courts. He should have the smallest possible function in controlling them.

As the attorney-general points out, a conference of judges is bound to be ineffectual in the constant task of administration and business management. The attorney-general seeks to be shorn of his part of the power in the interests of a more even justice. I think it is the first time on record that the head of a bureau ever did that.

Many of these reforms were first suggested by Judge William Denman a long time ago, in a remarkable analysis and set of recommendations, but it doesn't make any difference who suggested them. The force and the responsibility behind them is Homer.

The report on the Anti-Trust Division by Mr. Robert Jackson, assistant attorney-general is partly a political screed. But every lawyer must agree with him that the anti-trust acts are a flop and that, for the sake of business, big and little, as well as the public they need a good going over.

Neither Mr. Jackson nor the attorney-general made any specific recommendations for changes. But Mr. Cummings repeats what he is already on record as saying, that what this situation needs most is a careful and deliberate study and not sore snap shooting.

The record of successful litigation, from the government's viewpoint, in the solicitor-general's part of the report, is the best. I believe that the department has ever had. It reflects great credit on Stanley Reed and on the whole force of trial lawyers.

After finding so many things to pan, it is a pleasure to look at the story of a whole year's work in one great Cabinet branch and find so nearly a perfect score—a well-organized and manned machine hitting on all cylinders.

There have been many rumors that Mr. Cummings is tired and getting ready to step out of the Cabinet. The country has good reason to hope that he isn't do it—at least until he gets all this job of reformation buttoned up.

35,000 to Share Steel Work by Grace Plan

Bethlehem Head Raps CIO in Making Job Move Public

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (INS)—A work-sharing plan to save the jobs of 35,000 employes, while steel demand continues at its present low level, was announced today by Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company.

In announcing the plan, Grace "talked turkey" to critics of industry and sharply criticized the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Reporting that his corporation has spent $90,000,000 on a construction program begun in 1935, he asserted that "it is evident that in our case neither capital nor our belief in American industry is or has been on strike.

"It is both absurd and silly to suggest, as some do, that management gains any satisfaction from seeing productive facilities idle and employes without work. Production at fair prices is the lifeblood of the income from which wages are paid and profits are earned."

Explaining the decision to spread out work opportunities, Grace reported that steel demand "has reached a level approaching that of the 1932-1933 depression" and "consequently we find ourselves again struggling with the difficult problems of readjustment."

'Lawyer' New Word To Woman in Court

A Provincetown woman, charged with possessing an unregistered still, told Judge George C. Sweeney today in Federal Court she did not know what the word meant when he asked if she had a lawyer.

After Assistant U. S. Attorney Robert W. Meserve ascertained Mrs. Josephine Sousa was not represented by counsel, the court assigned a lawyer and continued the case. Mrs. Sousa was held in $1000 bail.

Father of Three Is Held As Attacker of Child

Fred Dean, 30, of Neponset street, Canton, who less than a year ago served 20 days for an offense involving a little girl, today was held in $5000 bail accused of an attack on 7-year-old Betty Carroll of Walpole street, Canton.

Dean, married and the father of three children, was arrested in Albany, N. Y., after the girl had told a pathetic story to her parents.

She said she had been beaten and mauled and when nearly unconscious placed across the rails of a railroad by her assailant. She said she gained strength before arrival of a train and crawled to safety.

Dean was also held in $300 on a charge of larceny of an automobile, in which he allegedly fled to Albany, and in $100 on the charge of driving without a license.

clearance papers in the not too distant future, but Roosevelt will not push him too precipitately.

Replacing him will be Louis Johnson, now assistant secretary of war a West Virginian, and former commander of the American Legion.

Note—Woodring stepped into the Cabinet temporarily after the death of Secretary Dern. He has been so obviously in love with his job that the President hated to relieve him. Incidentally, the generals rather like Woodring, say he has worked hard at the job.

GRANDPA GLASS—On the day he became an octogenarian, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia was being photographed with his granddaughter, Nancy Carter Boatwright, sitting on his knee.

The telephone rang, and Glass answered it. Later he said:

"That was Henry Morgenthau. He's coming up here to see me. If you want, you can stay and take pictures of me and him together."

"Thank you, Senator," said a cameraman, "but we'd rather take you with Nancy than with Secretary Morgenthau."

"Well," said The Senator, who once held Morgenthau's job, "she has a dern sight more sense."

NOTE—On the same day that Grandpa Glass became 80, Nancy became 12.

WAGE HOUR CLARIFIERS—The age should the wage-hour bill has been clarified considerably, and it now seems almost certain that some sort of bill will be passed this session. There were four chief clarifiers:

1—The President's message to Congress bearing down on the relation between labor and agriculture.

2—The full-page newspaper advertisements of the Southeast Governors' Conference which stated that the South did not want to profit by sweated labor.

3—The election of Lister Hill as Senator from Alabama, running on a wage-hour platform against Tom Heflin, who opposed it.

4—Christmas vacations spent by Congressmen in their districts sounding out sentiment.

SUPREME COURT RESIGNATIONS—The resignation of Justice Sutherland was like taking the key log out of a jam. It is likely to start a large flow of resignations. In fact, it is not impossible that the complexion of the Supreme Court will be changed almost entirely during Roosevelt's term of office.

With the Liberals now in control, there is less incentive for the Conservatives to stay on. Justice McReynolds has made no secret of the fact that he remained on the bench largely because of his vehement opposition to New Deal ideas. But now, being in the minority, his opposition is ineffective.

McReynolds is nearly 76, Justice Butler is 72, Chief Justice Hughes is 76. All are retirement possibilities. Even before they retire, the Court is likely to see some resignations on the Liberal side.

Most probable retirement is Justice Cardozo, now ill, who sometimes suffers from very serious heart trouble. Cardozo is 68, finally has come to like Washington better than he did, but he still is happiest at his home at Rye, N. Y., or in his native Manhattan.

The resignation of Justice Brandeis, 81, is a "long" possibility. Now past his 81st birthday, Brandeis is in good health, but not as active as he was. In any case, both Brandeis and Cardozo are sure to resign before Roosevelt leaves office. Otherwise they run the risk of having a conservative President fill their shoes with conservative successors.

N. E. Flood Pact Fight Resumed By Solons

Rep. M'Cormack Out To Amend Section Of Act of 1936

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 — Congressman John W. McCormack today sought to win approval for New England flood control compacts with a suggestion for an amendment to Section 3 of the Flood Control Act of 1936.

This effort to clear the way for new flood protection came after New England leaders had all but despaired of obtaining support of the President of approval of the present pacts in Congress.

Representative Kopplemann of Connecticut said, following a White House conference, that "the President was very emphatic on the position he has taken that rights of the people to power shall be maintained."

POWER REPORT

He said his conference followed receipt by the President of the report of the Power Commission, which stated ratification would violate three Federal Acts—Water Power Act of 1920, Public Utilities Act of 1935 and the Flood Control Act, of 1936.

It is the latter act that Congressman McCormack declared he would seek to have changed.

"It is my opinion," Congressman McCormick stated, "that the alternative to the present compact, so far as dams and reservoirs are concerned, is an amendment to do away with the requirement of local contributions for dam and reservoir projects.

FINANCED BY U. S.

"Such an amendment would make possible the prompt commencement of construction of dams and reservoirs," he continued.

"In this manner projects will be financed entirely by Federal funds and the Secretary of War will be authorized to acquire lands and rights of way and to use money heretofore or hereafter appropriated for carrying out the 1936 act."

It was learned that while President Roosevelt is unfavorable to the present compacts, he does approve of erection of dikes on the Connecticut river to protect the cities of Hartford and East Hartford, Ct., and Springfield, West Springfield, Chicopee, Northampton and Holyoke, Mass.

Ludlow War Vote Is Seen Major Issue

Backers Say Congress Action Will Settle Fate of Solons

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (INS)—Supporters of the rejected Ludlow war referendum proposal today pictured themselves in possession of a major issue that may settle the fate of many a senator or representative seeking re-election in this year's congressional campaigns.

Convinced the referendum plan —pigeon-holed by a vote of 209 to 188 by House administration forces yesterday—has overwhelming public approval, its proponents disclosed plans to carry their fight to the voters.

FIGHT JUST BEGUN

Senators La Follette (P.) of Wisconsin and Capper (R.) of Kansas, Representatives Ludlow (D.) of Indiana, Boileau (P.) of Wisconsin and Fish (R.) of New York joined in the prediction that "the fight has only begun."

"This is one of the livest issues in the nation today," Ludlow, author of the defeated resolution, declared. "The people want it. Of that I am convinced."

La Follette said:

"Because of the tremendous interest which the people have in this proposal, I would anticipate that it will be a major issue in many senatorial and congressional campaigns this year."

SEATS ARE COST

Fish bluntly predicted that the action of the House in responding to President Roosevelt's appeal to sidetrack the resolution "will cost at least 10 House Democrats their seats, either to other Democrats in the primaries, or to Republicans in the election."

Capper said he would demand that the Senate judiciary committee immediately begin hearings on three similar proposals pending in the Senate.

"The Senate and the nation is entitled to proper consideration of the referendum plan," he asserted.

Conn. Grange Head Says Taxes Unfair

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 11 (AP)—Frank H. Peet, state master of the Grange, asserted that fairness in taxation is questionable, said today that such levies should be "evenly distributed" and not in amount based on the individual's ability to pay.

Peet expressed disagreement with the principles of a general retail tax and said "today we are paying entirely too much in the way of hidden taxes."

Boston Redfern Searchers Facing Jungle Ant Armies

Explorers Stranded As Insect Hordes Approach Them

Trapped in the black jungles of British Guiana, members of the Redfern party that left Boston in November were reported fighting possible horrible deaths today.

An advancing army of the dread jungle ants, horror of the Amazon wilds, was the impending instrument of death.

SAW ANT ARMIES

A. S. Hutson, Canadian engineer, returned to Bartica, jumping-off place into the interior. He said he had been a few miles from Devil's Hole, the Cuyuni River rock where the Americans are waiting rescue.

Hutson said he saw armies of ants marching through the sector eating everything in their way. He added that some of his own provisions were destroyed by the locust-like insects.

Two of the stranded explorers, Mrs. Theodore J. Waldeck and William Astor Chandler, left Boston on the steamer Lady Nelson Nov. 21. They met Waldeck and Dr. Frederick J. Fox, New York dermatologist well known in Boston, at Demerara, British Guiana.

The quartet started up the Amazon in search for Paul Redfern, American flier missing since 1927, but reported alive in the deep interior of South America. It was the 10th time an attempt had been made to find the aviator.

SUPPLIES RAN LOW

When supplies ran low at New Year's the four Americans were deserted by their guides and boatmen. When last heard from they were waiting at the Devil's Hole, in the depths of British Guiana jungle for rescuers.

A relief boat now on its way to the Waldeck party will then start on the Redfern search Saturday, Hutson said.

The Waldeck expedition sailed from here strong in the belief that their quest for the lost American flier—would prove to be successful.

LEGGLY DEAD

They had not departed long when Redfern's wife filed a petition at Detroit to have her husband's legacy declared dead. The petition was granted January 4.

Counsel for Mrs. Waldeck was the moving factor behind the present expedition.

In an interview just before her departure from here she said that she was convinced that the white man would be found living in the jungles must be Redfern.

For a time she reported at that time, got Mrs. Redfern to withdraw a previous petition the flier's wife had filed to have him declared legally dead.

Woman Facing Doom Despite Maine Race

Serum Sped 84 Miles In 88 Minutes in Try to Save Life

ROCKLAND, Me., Jan. 11—Mrs. Tera Young, 23, of Camden, appeared doomed to die today, despite a wild automobile ride over 84 miles of ice-covered highway by State Trooper Ralph Price.

Mrs. Young is dying at the Knox County hospital a victim of the rare agranulocytosis, a disease of the bloodstream.

Trooper Price made the 84-mile dash with a container of pentonucleotide in 88 minutes, despite the dangerous road conditions along the curving highway that extends from Portland to Rockland.

Mrs. Young was stricken three days ago, but did not enter the hospital until late last night.

RARE SERUM

When the nature of her ailment was diagnosed, Dr. George H. Coombs, state health director, was summoned and he requested that the rare serum obtainable only in Portland and Boston be rushed to the hospital in an effort to save Mrs. Young.

Price, assigned to highway patrol outside Portland, was directed to fetch the serum.

As soon as he arrived at the hospital with the precious fluid, the serum was administered to Mrs. Young. At an early hour today it was said there appeared to be little chance the administration of the serum would prove successful because of the patient's late entry in the hospital.

DISCOVERED IN BOSTON

The rare serum was discovered at the Thorndyke research laboratory of the Boston City Hospital by Dr. Henry Jackson and Dr. Chester Kiefer, in 1931.

It is considered one of the major discoveries at the laboratory since its inception in 1930 during which close to $500,000 has been spent on research.

Previous to the discovery of pentonucleotide, agranulocytosis was fatal in every case. Discovery of the serum has reduced the death rate from this illness to 25 deaths in 100 cases.

Minister's Wife Tells Beatings, Gets Divorce

Mrs. C. O. Van Zandt Given Custody Of 2 Children

Beatings she alleged were administered to her by the Rev. Earl H. Van Zandt, former pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Hyde Park, were described today in Dedham Probate court by Mrs. Charlotte O. Van Zandt of Milton in winning an uncontested divorce.

Mrs. Van Zandt, who married the minister in Bennington, Vt., September 14, 1928, charged him with cruel and abusive treatment.

She had originally filed also a charge of unfaithfulness against her husband last July, but by agreement this allegation was waived.

Mrs. Van Zandt was granted a decree nisi by Judge Joseph R. McCoole, as well as custody of the two children, Gretel, seven, and Dirk, five. The minister was given the right to have the boy for one week each month and for three weeks together during the summer vacation period. He made no claim for the girl.

The Rev. Mr. Van Zandt ceased being pastor of the Hyde Park church several months ago. He claimed he had resigned because he had other plans in view, but one of the elders declared the resignation had been asked "because his conduct caused a controversy, particularly among women of the church."

Testifying in her suit, Mrs. Van Zandt said that in April, 1936, the minister got up from the breakfast table and struck her when she asked him to shovel out the back yard, so she could put little Dirk out in the sun.

In June of 1936 and at other times he also struck her, she said, including one time when she was in bed with the grippe and another time when he climbed out of the bathtub to punch her three times.

"He has the physique of a prize-fighter," she said. "I've been deathly afraid of him."

Miss Stanwyck Spurns Role, Off Film Payroll

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 11 (INS)—Barbara Stanwyck's troubles multiplied today with the revelation the dark-haired screen star has been suspended by RKO studio.

The studio announced last night that Miss Stanwyck, who is expected soon to wed Robert Taylor, M-G-M actor, was engaged in a court battle with her former husband, Frank Fay, radio and screen comic, over custody of their five-year-old adopted son, Dion.

The studio suspended Miss Stanwyck when she refused to play the lead in "Distant Field." Her objection, it was said, was due to the fact she was required to play an aging woman, similar to her part in "Stella Dallas."

She felt the part did not do her justice and that it would be injurious to her career to play two such similar roles in succession.

The studio has postponed production of the picture pending a possible change in Miss Stanwyck's decision. Meanwhile, she has been taken off the payroll.

Fay laughed today at requests made by Miss Stanwyck's attorneys that he be examined by a psychiatrist.

Fay brought Miss Stanwyck into the news leaders' spotlight when he initiated a court order by refusing to let him see their five-year-old son Adonis, since their divorce in 1935.

Miss Stanwyck has resisted attempts of Fay to have the order enforced, and in court yesterday her attorneys presented affidavits in support of his request for an examination of Fay.

She is survived by a daughter, Mary, and by her husband, in Boston and New York. Funeral services will be held Thursday.

Sally Clark 'Career Girl'

Anne's Sister Also Has Time for Romance

Sally Clark, Boston debutante and sister of the fiancee of John Roosevelt, has time for romance and a career, too, she declared today at New York.

"Right now, I'm a career girl," she confided in answer to reports that romantically ink her name with George McLanahan, scion of a wealthy New York family and a recent Yale graduate.

"I know Mr. McLanahan and we have had good fun at parties," Anne's younger sister said. "We met in Boston and were together often there and in New York since. I have been studying dancing. However, I'm a career girl and that's all that can be said now."

McLanahan visited the Clark's Nahant home at the time of the announcement of Anne Clark's engagement to young Roosevelt.

U. S. Rules on Security Tax

Worker Can't Deduct From Income Returns

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (AP)—Employers may deduct social security taxes in making out their federal income tax returns, the treasury said today, but employes may not do so.

A salaried person may deduct taxes he pays on his house, but not the one per cent old age security tax or the prospect of an old age pension, officials advised.

They explained the latter levy is technically an income tax and, under law, cannot be deducted in figuring the regular income tax. The tax on employers, however, is labeled an excise tax, and is deductible the same as the federal tax on automobiles and refrigerators.

196 Lb. 'Empress of Fat'

'Be Proud of Curves,' Says Elsa Maxwell

ELSA MAXWELL
Likes Butter, Jam

Fatal Error to Copy Fashion Plates She Warns

By HELEN CRAIG

Copyright, 1938, by International News Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (INS)—Elsa Maxwell weighs 196 pounds. And she is proud of it.

In fact the queen of the "international set" would just as soon be called the Empress of embonpoint. She is more pleased with the fact that she rates mention by fashion editors for her hardy-one if capacious appearance at the big time social functions that she is of reams of publicity evoked by any ons of her famous parties.

Mirroring a butter-and-jam slathered muffin and sipping tea with cream, Miss Maxwell sat in her hotel apartment and let fly a barrage of her famous scathing wit at the largish ladies of the land—her "sisters under the skin."

COURAGE OF HER CURVES

Looking this reporter squarely in the eye, she declared:

"With a little help from the other women like me in America, I could make it fashionable to be fat."

"But that won't happen, because no fat woman—except me—has the courage of her curves.

"The average fat woman shuffles into a room full of people exactly as if she were under sentence of death and walking that long last mile! And she makes it just as hard on the spectators as if they were witnessing an execution."

"Advice to fat women about clothes? Certainly," said Miss Maxwell. "But remember, when this goes into the paper, don't you dare pull my punches and pretend I call them 'large' or 'heavy' or any of those fancy names. If a woman is fat she might just as well face it and go on from there, not try to camouflage it with a lot of silly synonyms."

DRESSED FOR COMFORT

Head up, chest out (no matter how fat) dressed in clothes that are comfortable, graceful and correct for the occasion (that's the Maxwell prescription for facing a party with aplomb or well as avoidance thereof), and you've got half the battle won.

"It's a fatal mistake for a fat woman to try to get herself up like the fashion plates," she said.

"In a way, I think we're the lucky ones, for most of the fashion designers today seem to take a sadistic delight in turning pretty women into surrealist horrors. After all, there are very few fat women who would be so naive as to pile old shoes and surgical instruments on their heads and call them hats!"

Most modern clothes look to Miss Maxwell as if they were made for "impossible, Venetian-glass women who couldn't exist and get any fun out of life anyway." In her case, her clothes are specially designed for her ample form by a Paris dressmaker noted for making women look most elegantly ladylike.

RULE NUMBER ONE

But Miss Maxwell believes that every heavy (oops! Sorry Miss Maxwell) figure can be smartly covered in ready-made clothes that are draped, not fitted — dresses specially created in large sizes, not blown-up versions of a style-like model.

"The first rule for any dress is that it should not be tight anywhere," she said. "There should be plenty of room in the skirt, the blouse, the armholes. Dresses not on the hips are best, because they cling in long lines, and don't bind when you move. They have room without a bunchy or unnatural look either, which to my mind is just as bad as goo-goo girlishness.

"And don't make the mistake of being tightly corseted. It doesn't hide anything—in fact it makes you look fatter. No one can be gay and be bound in like a mummy!"

TRAINED PIG ACT"

All the clothes sense in the world won't help the large lady who is overproud of her tiny foot, Miss Maxwell warns.

"A fat woman who minces in with her feet bulging painfully out of a pair of dainty little slippers about two sizes too small looks like one of those trained pig acts in the circus," she fumed.

Well-groomed hands, reasonable makeup and a simple, close-to-the-head coiffure are the remaining points on Miss Maxwell's style program.

"No page boy bobs or Shirley Temple curls, please. A fat woman with her hair in gushing locks should be shot on the firing line!" was the final gentle Maxwellian fashion hint.

You tip the scales at upward of a hundred and fifty?

You lucky girl!

Maybe you'll grow up to be another Elsa Maxwell.

Roosevelt Drafts Army, Navy Plans

Wants U. S. to Have Forces Big Enough to Assure Peace

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (INS)—President Roosevelt today prepared to serve notice on a war-mad world that the United States will keep peace by building the most powerful national defense in history.

The President has decided upon a foreign policy which recognizes that armed might demands the respect of war-making nations, and weakness invites attack.

Determined to prevent American embroilment in foreign wars, if possible, and at the same time command respect for American rights, the President today devoted major attention to completing plans for strengthening the nation's defenses on a scale surpassing any previous peacetime program.

3 POWERFUL FORCES

To achieve these ends the President has decided upon:

1—Complete modernization and mechanization of the army.

2—Construction of a navy capable not only of preventing an enemy from attacking the continental United States, but also strong enough to act as a protective bulwark for America's possessions in the Pacific.

3—To build an air force so powerful it can maintain superiority in the air over any air fleet that could be flung against it.

When these immediate objectives are accomplished, the President feels that the United States will become a force for peace in the world that will command respect.

Before sending his special message to Congress, which now is not expected for several days, the President called on the Navy high command for new data on the types of warships and the number of them the Navy needs.

He conferred lengthily with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and Chief of Naval Operations Admiral William D. Leahy, canvassing the world situation and America's defense deficiencies.

Admiral Leahy laid before the President his recommendations for new warship construction. When these are studied, the President will send his special message to Congress, raising the national defense budget for next year to approximately $1,200,000,000.

In his regular budget, Roosevelt already has asked for $901,000,000 for maintenance and increase of the armed forces during the fiscal year starting July 1. This exceeds last year's budget, itself a record-breaker for peace time army and navy expenditures, by $35,000,000.

SHIPS BEING BUILT

The supplemental national defense requests are expected to provide for construction of one more battleship, two new "pocket-size" aircraft carriers, several super-fast "express" cruisers of a revolutionary type, a number of submarines and destroyers, and numerous auxiliaries.

The present budget calls for constructing 18 new warships next year. These, additional to 70 warships now being built in American yards include two 35,000-ton battleships, two light cruisers, eight destroyers and six submarines. Once will be laid down, and there will be five new battleships either under construction or provided for.

Japs Press for Peace, But Push War on China

(Copyright, 1938

TOYKO, Jan. 11 (INS)—The war leaders of Japan have lost out to the conservatives and Tokyo has decided to press for peace with China instead of resorting to open declaration of hostilities, International News Service learned today.

The decision was reached at an extraordinary imperial conference session, which climaxed a three-day round of discussions participated in by all members of the Cabinet.

Bitter wrangling between the military faction and conservatives preceded the decision.

Under its terms, the war will be pushed until China is ready to agree to Japan's peace terms but there will be no open declaration of hostilities.

The navy party, headed by Admiral Nobumasa Suetsugu, used all the power at its command to bring about an immediate declaration of war, permitting a blockade of the Hongkong coast and other measures to ensure speedy victory.

WOULD FIGHT BRITAIN

But the conservatives carried the day with arguments that included the warning that President Roosevelt would invoke the neutrality act if war were declared.

There was only one chance that the momentous decision of the imperial conference might be overruled and bring about a victory for the warmongers.

This was the possibility that Premier Fumimaro Konoye's cabinet might collapse, and Suetsugu take over the reins of government.

The latter, now Minister of the Interior, is all in favor of immediate declaration of war and actually harbors an ambition to send Japan into the battlefield against Great Britain and Soviet Russia.

Suetsugu distinguished himself recently by warning that Japan's ultimate aim and intention is to drive the white races out of Asia entirely.

Against Suetsugu's fulminations, the conservative element in the cabinet and on the general staff submitted a lengthy list of arguments against declaration of war which for the time being, at least proved effective.

CHINA MAY SAVE SELF

These included:

1—In view of general conditions, an official declaration of war would be unlimited.

2—Such action would hamper Japan in obtaining needed supplies of raw materials and finished goods, such as automobiles and airplanes.

3—Entanglement with Britain and the Soviets at the present time would be extremely risky.

4—Every precaution must be taken to prevent President Roosevelt from invoking the neutrality act.

5—After a month or two of continued warfare on the same basis as at present, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek is likely to reconsider Japan's peace terms to save China from complete dismemberment.

After long and bitter argument the imperial conference finally agreed to submit its program to Emperor Hirohito.

Pope Doesn't Want Japs To Win, Bishop Asserts

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (INS)—Pope Pius XI refused to favor the Japanese in their war against China, the Rev. Paul Yupkin, Roman Catholic bishop of Nanking declared here today.

Spokesman for the 3,500,000 Catholics in China and director of all Catholic organizations in China, the prelate declared:

"The Holy Father does not want Japan to win. He is the common father of all the world and so would not speak publicly against a whole nation of his children. He has given me a gift for war relief.

"He has told me personally: 'I hope the war will be over as quickly as possible with as honorable peace.' The Vatican is anti-Communistic, as is well known. But the Vatican is always for peace and justice.

"The Observatore Romano has denied reports that the Holy Father favors Japan, but those stories persist. They are lies, as the Japanese army now making war only against the Nationalist Government and not all China. But that, too, is a lie, for all China is behind Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek because he is for all China."

Chinese Troops Defeat Japs At Tsining

"Lifeline" Railway Threat Now Removed, Gen. Chiang Says

SHANGHAI, Jan. 11 (INS)—Japanese forces attacking Tsining, 120 miles south of Tsinan, fallen Shantung provincial capital, were defeated today by Chinese troops, according to an official statement issued at Hankow, headquarters of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

The Chinese claimed that as a result of this defeat the Japanese threat against the strategic Lunghai railway, China's "life-line" into the central interior, has been almost entirely removed.

Japanese officials here denied the Hankow claims, asserting Chinese troops in the Lunghai railway area were in retreat.

Reports from Hongkong, British crown colony near Canton, said a foreigner arriving there from China's interior declared huge munitions shipments were en route to Hankow from various points in China.

PLANES RAID HANKOW

Early this morning, it was stated, 24 Japanese bombing planes raided Hankow, bombing the airfield and suburbs.

In retaliation, Chinese planes, some of them civilian manufacture and manned by trained war pilots, raided Japanese-held Kwangteh. They destroyed ten Japanese bombing planes, according to Chinese reports.

Other Hongkong advices stated that Dr. Sun Fo, well known Chinese statesman, is being sent on a mission to Russia on behalf of the Chiang Kai-Shek regime. He allegedly was authorized to offer Manchuria and Outer Mongolia to Russia in exchange for material Soviet assistance against Japan.

BRITISH SHIPS FLEE

Four British gunboats were forced to flee from the Canton river yesterday when Chinese defenders of the strategic Bogue fired on a Japanese warship attempting to send boatparties in small boats for an attack against the city.

Observers said the Japanese ship appeared to have been hit several times by the Chinese shells and was forced to retreat out of range of the Chinese guns, deserting the landing party.

The British vessels, almost directly in the line of fire, made a hasty retreat to avoid being hit.

Although Japanese troops heavily occupied Tsingtao, rich Shantung province port to the north, Chinese guerrilla war maintained on other fronts.

Hurley Denies Own Breen Sift

Gov. Hurley today denied reports he was personally investigating the Warner Brothers-Communist Party case, his special officer, John C. Breen, was detailed to the matter.

"Breen has been right here at the State House and will stay here," the governor said. "Besides, if I were going to 'intervene' in the investigation I must certainly would communicate with Police Commissioner Timilty."

Senator Angier L. Goodwin of Melrose, chairman of the Senate Judiciary committee, announced executive action on the proposed measure to give the Supreme Judicial Court power to disbar lawyers will be deferred for a week.

This is the measure generally understood to be aimed, for immediate purposes, at Mayor O'Brien of Revere, whose activities there have been under investigation by the attorney-general. However, the provision would be a permanent one.

Representative Philip G. Bowker of Brookline, father of the bill, said the deferred action was requested by Attorney-General Dana, who is preparing additional legislation.

N. E. Solons War On Trade Pact With Britain

Lodge Says Leaders Sacrifice People to Try Theories

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (AP)—New England's congressmen protested today against the possible inclusion of any articles manufactured in New England in the proposed reciprocal trade agreement with Great Britain.

Representative Casey (D.) of Massachusetts, in a letter to Secretary Hull, remarked that articles like pliable tariff concessions with Great Britain include fisheries products, cotton cloth, velveteen, boots and shoes and woolen manufactures.

LODGE RAPS THEORIES

Senator Lodge (R.) of Massachusetts, a member of the Senate committee investigating unemployment and relief, declared "government leaders seem ready to sacrifice human welfare in their pursuit of economic theories.

"They ought to substitute jobs first for the textile and shoe industries before negotiating reciprocal trade agreements harmful to the nation's industries," Lodge said.

"At the hearing on unemployment, textile manufacturers' representatives agreed negotiation of an agreement including textiles would add to the unemployment of both northern and southern mills."

BRIDGES OPPOSED

Senator Bridges (R.) of New Hampshire said he opposed the treaty that would make a dumping ground of the United States for British goods competing with domestic products.

EMPLOYMENT DROPS

Russell F. Fisher, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, said Hull's list of articles for possible concessions "reads like the entire list of cotton products covered in the present tariff act."

He declared "employment in Northern cotton mills was 35 per cent below a corresponding period of 1937 and those who are employed are working only about 30 hours a week. If the government expects to help employment there must be protection for the textile industries, or in order rather than less."

Wage increases in American cotton mills since the original tariff act was passed "offset many of our wages on a fourth higher scale in relation to world wages than at the time of the act."

Find Alimony Not Taxable

Appeals Board Ruling Favors Princess

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (AP)—The board of tax appeals used the case of Princess Anne to rule that income received by a divorced woman as alimony is taxable.

By a vote of 13 to 3 the board said the case involved a deficiency assessment against Princess Anne of Rumania, married in the United States in 1900 to Gerald P. Fitzgerald of Uniontown, Pa. They were divorced in 1907. An alimony contract was arranged and it continued in force despite her subsequent marriage in 1911 to Prince Victor of Thurn and Taxis.

Blame Downdraft As 10 Die in Plane

BOZEMAN, Mont., Jan. 11 (INS)—Treacherous air currents were unofficially blamed today for the crash of a Northwest Airlines plane yesterday, bringing death to ten men.

An investigators converged on the scene and ranchers struggled over almost impassable snow-covered trails to bring out the bodies, belief grew that Pilot Nick Mamer, who had flown a million miles without injuring a passenger, had been trapped in a downdraft from which there was no escape.

A wind was howling throughout the mountains, whipping up gusts of snow and obscuring the ground, according to observers, when the big 14-passenger, twin-motored plane went down.

Though company officials declined to discuss possible causes of the disaster pending arrival of Department of Commerce investigators, others told reporters who saw the plane plummet from an altitude of 8,000 feet into a small open patch between two ridges within sight of the airport theory.

PLANE SWERVED

Pilot Mamer was believed to have encountered the fatal current's while flying on what he called the "fair weather" course, six or seven miles north of the regular beacon course between Butte and Billings.

The veteran pilot, it was thought, swerved his plane away from a mountain canyon only to be caught in a downdraft that shot the machine swiftly downward for several hundred feet. Facing a mountain ahead, Mamer then was believed to have pulled his motor, thus losing speed and control.

That unofficial theory was strengthened because no tracks of traction were found at the scene. The plane had nosed squarely into the snow-covered terrain. The impact had been terrific, and the airliner burst into flames.

ALL ARE BURNED

All occupants were badly burned.

Six passengers and four company employes perished when the new Lockheed Electra of Northwest Airlines plunged into the slope.

VICTIMS LISTED

The victims were:

LIEUT. NICK MAMER, Spokane, Wash., pilot.

FRED WEST, Spokane, copilot.

AL H. CROONQUIST, Montana traffic manager of Northwest Lines, Billings.

TED ANDERSON, company mechanic, St. Paul, Minn.

The two passengers listed by the company were:

G. A. ANDERSON, Seattle, Wash.

DOUGLAS MacKAY, Hudson Bay Co. representative, Winnipeg, Man.

LLOYD LEVIN, Detroit, Mich.

WALTER TON, St. Paul, Minn.

Wives, Husbands Swap Revealed

waited downstairs, Cunliffe said. On a signal from the latter, the Quinns entered upstairs while Cunliffe and Watson cambered in the window.

Mrs. Watson, partly clothed, rushed down the stairs to meet Quinn coming in the window, Cunliffe said, while Lee tried to hide in a closet.

WIFE TYPED IN RAID

Attorney William H. McSweeney, counsel for Mrs. Walsh, charged Watson had conspired with Mrs. Lee to force the other couple to compromising position. He said on nights the Lees called upon the Watsons, Mrs. Lee would go out, leaving Mrs. Watson alone with Lee.

All the time the April 6 raid was under way, Cunliffe testified, Mrs. Lee remained in the kitchen of the seven-room house practising upon the typewriter.

Mrs. Lee refused to the stand, declined comment.

"Was this a convenient arrangement to frame this couple?" he was asked by Judge Edward B. O'Brien.

"No," he replied.

The judge asked Mrs. Watson's age.

"Do I understand you admit these acts of infidelity and claim that by his connivance Watson was a party to it?"

After a conference with Lee and Mrs. Watson, Attorney Thomas Henry of the latter stated:

"I can flatly state that we admit now that there were infimate relations at one time between Mrs. Watson and Mr. Lee when Mr. Watson's husband was with Mrs. Lee."

Judge O'Brien then asked Attorney Henry to ask Watson if it was the consent of all four parties to be with each other partners for the night?

Watson replied firmly in the negative.

EACH COUPLE HAS SON

Watson testified the two couples had long been friends, and the Watsons had visited the Lees at their summer cottage on the Cape.

The Watsons were married Oct. 14, 1927, have a son, Raymond, six. Both wives, pretty brunettes, were in court. Judge O'Brien frequently warned witnesses, saying:

"We are not going to make a comedy of this case."

Watson, he first suspected his wife of infidelity last year, and in January, 1937, hired the Quinns to obtain evidence.

Leading Lowest Priced Cars

For years, buyers of lowest priced cars have been guided by the sound advice . . . "Look at all three." It was good advice, for they are all good cars, these three. They have given a big money's worth to millions.

[illegible] have to say . . . a group of average owners who liked their cars and thought they had the biggest money's worth at the market . . . until we asked them to try out a new lowest priced car. Then they settled side by side with a new 1938 model of the car they had been driving. The following statements are typical of what these owners said:

Owner of "Car A" (name on request): "I'm surprised at the difference . . . your new car wins easily. The motor never seems to strain a bit, at any speed. The steering is great . . . much less road shock."

Owner of "Car B" (name on request): "A lot roomier car than mine, and the back seat is more comfortable. The Hudson 112 is steadier, too . . . the motor smoother and quieter. A better car all around!"

Owner of "Car C" (name on request): "Those brakes make a hit with me. You really STOP in a Hudson . . . quicker and straighter. As easier car to handle, too. Safer and at the same time . . . [illegible] opinions."

What is this new lowest priced car which dared invite side-by-side comparisons by men and women who had bought and used with the "other three"? IT IS THE NEW HUDSON 112, soon to be announced.

* * *

First preview of the new Hudson 112 will be held here this week. Come and see a combination of size, roomy smooth performance, sturdiness and safety on the one hand, and remarkably low cost of ownership and operation on the other . . . such as has never been offered in any other lowest priced car . . . a better deal for your dollar.

Ayres Sees Trade Pickup by July If—

Economist Tells Senate Group Labor, Business, U. S. Must Cooperate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (INS)—A general upturn in business by the middle of the year was predicted today by Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland economist.

Testifying before the senate business recession investigating committee, Ayres warned, however, that there must be cooperation between business, government and labor to bring about the upturn.

"And only by such co-operation," he added, "can we have the kind of recovery we all hope for."

Big business is rapidly decreasing large inventories, Ayres said, adding:

"It seems to me that we should reach the bottom the first half of this year, because consumption is faster than it was several weeks ago."

LOOKS TO EUROPE

He warned, however, that recovery will be slower than the recession, and that much depends on Europe.

"Before the depression, the utilities got about $1,000,000,000 a year in securities and spent much of this for new construction," he said.

"There's an indication that they will return to their old levels if they feel prospects for return on investments are reasonably good."

PASSENGERS NEEDED

This would mean much to the railroads which used to spend $2,000,000,000 a year, and which during the depression spent about $750,000,000.

"Although the railroads have applied for a rate increase, they also need greater volume of business," he said.

"If those two things could happen the railroad and steel industry would become prosperous."

Ayres added he believes there is no one panacea for the return of prosperity.

"But I think repeal of the undistributed profits tax would be the cheapest investment at this time for Congress to make."

Respecting a proposed fund for relief Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today favored a method look for the farmer before the committee.

Declaring that if money were available the farm rehabilitation program could be expanded to ten or three times its present size, Wallace said:

"We are facing an urgent necessity for expanding rural relief. The demand for federal aid is being augmented daily by a variety of factors—notably an impending drouth in certain areas, sagging farm prices, the rapid mechanization of agriculture, and the industrial recession."

Wallace declined to forecast the ultimate requirements of a comprehensive relief program for the farmer.

"At this date, it is impossible to foresee the speed with which these demands may grow, or even to predict their magnitude within the next few months," he said. "They will be determined, in large measure, by the weather and the course of business recovery.

"These things, however, are certain: Distress already is widespread throughout broad sectors of american agriculture—it is growing rapidly—and neither local nor federal agencies have the means to cope with it."

See Richardson Due to Go

Report that Commissioner of Public Works Edward M. Richardson will be asked to resign and a new commissioner appointed within 48 hours circulated through City Hall today.

A request for Richardson's resignation would not, in any event, be sponsored by being one of former Mayor Mansfield's appointees, and the public sorrow job being one of the biggest plums available to the mayor.

Mayor Tobin himself refused comment. No indication of Richardson's successor has been given.

Council Moves For 'Younger Police Force'

City Drafts Measure To Reduce Age Of New Men

Seeking a younger and more energetic police department for Boston, the city law department today was drafting legislation to reduce the entrance requirements from 25 years to 22.

The move was launched in the City Council by Councillor John F. Dowd of Roxbury who argued that the present age limit of 25 is higher than that in almost every other large city.

Dowd declared the present age requirements worked as a definite bar against the youth of Boston and saw a better police department through lowering of the entrance age.

The council approved his order, sending it to the law department for necessary drafting of legislation.

Mayor Maurice J. Tobin was given authority to borrow $6,000,000 in anticipation of tax collections following unanimous passage of a City Council order of approval.

Among new orders introduced was one by Councilor Robert D. Wilson for authority to borrow $100,000 outside the debt limit for a municipal building at Codman square.

A petition of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway, to operate buses from the Milton line to Park square and Haymarket square, was referred to the committee on privileges.

Board of 3 to Decide Prize Sums Provided in Proposal

Establishment of a state lottery to convert $36,000,000 to cash one year, is sought in a bill filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives today by Representative Alfred M. Bessette of New Bedford.

The members of the board would be named by the governor with approval of the council and the terms would be for a six-year period.

The measure also asks that the commission be authorized to draw up plans to conduct and operate a state lottery to raise funds to defray expenses of the commission, and to convert $36,000,000 in any one year.

11 More Deputy Tax Collectors Under Fire

Misconduct and Abuse Of Process Charged By Dever's Aide

Eleven more Massachusetts deputy tax collectors were charged with gross misconduct and abuse of process today by Assistant Attorney General Maurice F. Goldman in his drive against deputies who allegedly have overstepped their authority.

These 11 bring to a total of 20 the deputy collectors against whom Goldman has preferred charges.

Three of the cases have already been heard by State Commissioner of Taxation and Corporations Henry F. Long, but no decision has yet been announced.

Those against whom Assistant Attorney General Goldman lodged charges today are:

Frank P. Lane, Joseph L. Bennett and William C. Gregory, all of Boston; Dominic Conte, Waltham; William F. Duggan, Arlington; Milton H. Dunstan, Quincy; John D. Hayes, Milton; John H. Fenton, North Andover, and Harold F. Anderson, Joseph B. Powers and Matthew W. Chait, all of Pittsfield.

ASKS JOB DELAY

Goldman requested that Commissioner Long hold up appointments of these men as deputy tax collectors for 1938 until the charges against them have been heard and decided.

The same request has been made in the case of the other nine, including those against whom charges have been preferred—Francis C. Murray of Quincy, John N. Loud of Arlington and Morris Yorman of Marlboro.

The remaining six who are charged with gross misconduct and abuse of process, but whose cases have not been heard yet, are:

MORE CHARGES LISTED

In his communication to Tax Commissioner Long today Goldman said in part:

"In the interest of the citizens of the commonwealth whose liberties have been thus taken away by persons who are wholly unfit for position of trust and responsibility as officers of the Commonwealth, I request that pending the hearing of the evidence upon the charges herein made you do not approve their appointments under the provisions of the General Laws, Chapter 60.

"It occurs to the writer that John H. Howard of Gallivan boulevard, Dorchester, should not be approved at this time in view of the fact that a jury has recently found against him in a case where he was sued by a taxpayer on a false arrest.

"I anticipate giving to you shortly additional names of deputy tax collectors similarly involved in abuses of process and guilty of gross misconduct."

U. S. Best Place, Says Elliott Roosevelt

Declares Americans Have More Chance To Win Success

Special to Boston Evening American

CHICAGO, Jan. 11—In America young men have their best opportunity to succeed in business, Elliott Roosevelt, 29-year-old son of the President, told a radio audience in a talk delivered from here.

Young Roosevelt, who is president and general manager of Hearst Radio, Inc., said:

"You sometimes hear people saying that hard times are coming and the country's going to the dogs, but don't believe it.

"I don't know anything about politics, but I do know this is a great country—the best place on earth for a young man to 'be starting out in business.'"

Answering questions in a radio interview on the problems of a President's son in business, he declared that "it's awfully tough to be the son of a President."

He added:

"Even though I'm tremendously fond of my father, I try to stay as far away from Washington as I can."

That is the reason, explained that he owns and operates a successful, 1500-acre ranch near Fort Worth, Tex., and first ventured into radio in the Southwest.

With a laugh, the President's son explained why he quit school at 20 to go to work, saying:

"Well, I just decided I wanted to go to work, so I went. At the time I was already admitted to Princeton. I mean, I wasn't too dumb to pass the exams.

"As a matter of fact, even though I'm the only member of my family who didn't go to college, I'm also the only one who is a member of a college board of regents—Texas A. & M."

He told briefly of his first venture into advertising, his aviation editorship for the Hearst morning newspapers, his operation of an airline in Texas and of his most recent appointment as executive of Hearst Radio, Inc.

The interview was heard over Station WEAF and the red network of the National Broadcasting Company.

Man Overcome In Everett Fire

New Inspector Gives Alarm, Aids Victims

One man was overcome with smoke and several persons were rescued at a two-alarm fire that swept a three-family wooden house on Hancock street, Everett, today.

Firemen from Everett, Somerville, Chelsea, Revere and Malden gave aid.

The blaze was discovered by Everett's newly-appointed fire inspector, Walter O'Brien, attached to Engine 3, who was on the way to answer another alarm in the Hancock street section.

O'Brien pulled the box and helped rescue families in two of the tenements. In a third tenement, nobody was at home.

Inspector O'Brien carried Peter Verrino, 42, a night worker, who was asleep on the second floor, and was overcome with smoke, to safety. His daughter, Cecelia, 15, led the house with Anthony, her four-year-old brother.

Brought to safety were also Peter Savirino and his family who occupied the second floor.

Damages was estimated at $2000.

Bickford Balks At 'Gag' Rules

Possibility that Leland C. Bickford, of Medford, radio commentator, may refuse to appear voluntarily before the Legislature and be subpoenaed if he recently made against certain legislators, loomed today.

Bickford has openly charged that Senate votes can be purchased for $100 down to a pound of tea.

The Senate rules committee was scheduled to decide today whether or not to call Bickford, but it was expected that the committee would limit the line of questions.

When Senator William H. McSweeney, chief target of Rackford's caustic attacks, demanded Bickford be forced to prove his charges before the Legislature, Bickford said:

"I am ready to go to the State House and prove everything I have said, if I am not muzzled. But tell the whole story up there if I can go into the whole business and if I can bring in all the witnesses I want to call.

"I am not going up there though if I can't bring the whole story of what is going on into the open."

There appeared to be no doubt today that the rules committee would order the Bickford matter into a hearing tomorrow. Whether he is gagged by committee rules, however, is doubted.

HELP 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

To Flush out Acids and Other Poisonous Waste

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 Miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Many people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood often due to functional kidney disorders, may be the beginning of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 Miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Banished to College Zoo, 'Don' Foregoes Bon-Bon Diet

"Donald Jerome Duck," whose name really shouldn't be a boy's, moped today in Wellesley College vivarium while pretty students sought a way to make her happy.

The duck was banished from Beebe Hall, a dormitory, when authorities found the bird living on bon bons and frosted cake in the swank quarters of her mistress, Miss Lucille Brown, a sophomore from Colorado.

Now "Donald" is more naturally housed in what is known as the college zoo and fed on more healthful foods. Yet "Donald" can't seem to forget her taste of rich living.

Neither can she seem to forgive Miss Brown, who relegated her to the status of a zoo specimen.

So the problem today is finding a new mistress in life for discontented "Donald."

Some of the deepest thinkers among the undergraduates have reasoned that what "Donald" lacks is romance and responsibility.

And to that end, certain pretty students are shopping for about a dozen ducklings to make their pet "forget."

Ex-Policeman Gets Suspended Term

Raids on Back Bay letter boxes today brought Abbott Dalrymple, 39, of Melrose street, South End, a six months' suspended jail sentence when he pleaded guilty in federal court.

Judge George C. Sweeney suspended the sentence on recommendation of Assistant U. S. Attorney Jackson Schultz, who said Dalrymple, a former Metropolitan district police officer, had a good reputation and committed the thefts when intoxicated.

Hubby Won This Argument

Score a point for married men in the perennial battle with their wives over whether they are dressed warmly enough for the weather.

An angry wife, whose husband ignored her advice to wear his overcoat, called upon Wellesley police to settle the issue. Police officials hastened to the scene. When they arrived, many of them undoubtedly from Howells's children, John Mead husbands, firmly decided the man was within his rights.

"I'm strong enough to go without a coat," the husband said. "And it's none of my wife's business anyway."

Woman, 79, Rescued; 8 Flee Fire in Medford

A 79-year-old woman was carried to safety and eight other persons led to the street through smoke early today when flames swept a long, rambling rag factory on Union street, Medford.

Two alarms were sounded for the fire in the Medford Toy House, which is attached to two dwellings.

Mrs. Frank DeVincent was aroused by the crackling of flames and called her husband. They aroused their three children and then awakened Mr. and Mrs. John Crowhan and daughter, Joan, four, other occupants of the building.

Through dense smoke, DeVincent carried the home of Miss Hortense Mitchell, 79, and awakened the sleeping woman. He aided her out and then on her pleas returned to free three cats trapped in the cellar.

Firemen fought the blaze in freezing weather. Damage was estimated at $5000 and the cause is given as defective wiring.

5 Children Among 11 Driven Into Bitter Cold

Eleven persons, including five small children, were driven to the wintry temperature of the street today when fire swept the first floor of a three-storey dwelling in Kenberma road, Mattapan.

Careless smoking, according to fire officials, caused the blaze, which did $1500 damage.

Fleeing were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Cray and their three children, Eugene, Jr., 9, Robert, 5, and Eleanor 3; Mr. and Mrs. James Lynch, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Lynn and their children, Gloria, 6, and Frederick, 5.

Killer DiStasio Bares Death Feud Wtih Son

took another policy out without my knowledge."

Scharton said following the interview in the State prison death house that he would appear before the Governor's Council tomorrow and ask for a commutation to life imprisonment for the son.

He will not request clemency for the father, he declared.

The DiStasios are scheduled to die during the week of January 17 for the torch murder of Daniel Crowley, South End laborer, in Hudson in 1935.

FATHER-SON BREAK

Bitterly, the thin-featured, condemned old man told of the wedding breach that came between him and Anthony—a breach the state decreed will be sealed by death.

He told the Boston Evening American:

"From the time I was arrested, no one talked to me about my trial.

"I knew that we had a lawyer, because my son told me his father-in-law had got us a lawyer.

"I only saw him (the lawyer, twice—once when he came and told me he could make a deal with the district attorney to get us both life or to have one go to the chair and save the other; the other time when he came after I was convicted and asked me to get some money to take the case to Washington.

"Everything I said to the police and at the trial I said for the purpose of saving my son.

"In the jail at East Cambridge, I asked my son why he had blamed me for the crime.

"He said he did not and asked me how he could have blamed me when I was not even there. He said, 'The only thing I said was that you drove the car.'

"I asked him why he said that. He said he thought it would help me. I asked him how he thought it could help me—that it only put me in bad.

"I DIE FOR YOU"

"I said to him, 'You robbed me in my business, now you are trying to send me to the electric chair. I know I have been a lot of headaches to you.'

"I said, 'I am going to my death now to pay a penalty you should pay.'

"He said, 'I know it.'

"It has been asked that I write a letter saying that my confession was true and that I threatened my son in doing the murder. I will write a letter saying that I did something which I did not do."

DUE TO DIE IN WEEK

Executions at State Prison generally take place just after Monday midnight—and unless the governor's council intercedes, father and son will probably go to their doom early next Tuesday morning.

Since their conviction, Frank DiStasio has been in the death house awaiting the punishment of the law on four separate occasions. His son has awaited his fate there three times.

On each occasion, a stay was granted to enable their counsel to carry on his long legal fight to cheat the chair.

This time, action by the executive council is the last hope. Otherwise, their long "last mile" will come next week.

Hurleys Feted In Candlelight

Candlelight furnished illumination early today for guests at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, including Governor Hurley and Mrs. Hurley, celebrating their 14th wedding anniversary.

It was not a planned novelty, but was caused by a temporary breakdown of the hotel's lighting plant.

Elevators stopped suddenly, but no one was trapped. When patrons called the switchboard from their rooms they were told to light matches and locate the candles on the bureaus.

At 1:30 a. m., two hours after the breakdown, a temporary connection was made.

Hortense Odlum Talks to Admen

Attractive and efficient, Hortense M. Odlum, president of Bonwit Teller, New York, was guest speaker today at the weekly luncheon of the Advertising Club of Boston.

Her subject was "The Consumer Comes First."

Mrs. Odlum, one of the few top department store executives in the country, went to Bonwit Teller in 1932 as an "idea expert" and advanced to the head of the organization after she had made famous such items as the bridal counsel, who plans the wedding party and trousseau; the travel fashion authority, who grooms a sea traveler "for everywhere," and the clothes assembly, which makes a specialty of dressing women to please their husbands.

As a result of her remarkable "selling plans," she was asked to accept the presidency of the store in 1934.

DO COW-PUNCHERS APPRECIATE CAMEL'S COSTLIER TOBACCOS?

TED YOCHUM was born and raised in the cattle country. He's a top hand at riding herd. Speaking from personal observation, Ted says: "Cow-punchers are great Camel smokers. Any hombre who's ridin' herd has a natural hankering for the kind of mild, tasty smokin' Camels give him. And seems like if a man smokes Camels once—he sticks to Camels. Me—I've been enjoying Camels for nigh on to eight years. Come round-up time—I'm in the saddle for hours, and not sparin' myself. A Camel sure hits the spot then. I get a mighty pleasant 'lift.'"

Yes, and to America at large, Camel's costlier tobaccos have such a special appeal that they are the largest-selling cigarette in this country!

AUTO MECHANIC Al Patterson: "Camels are smooth smokin', all right! In the garage business you have to catch your meals on the run. Camels seem to smooth the way for good digestion. The Mrs. smokes Camels too."

SALESGIRL Elsie Schumacher works in a department store. She says: "When the rush gets me to feeling worn out—it's me for a Camel, and I get a quick 'lift.' Practically all of us girls in the store prefer Camels."

PHARMACIST J. E. Hayus says: "I think Camels are a simply swell cigarette. I get in a lot of Camel smoking during the day. Camels are milder. And when I say I never tire of Camel's taste—it's experience talking."

CHIEF SIGNALMAN on the N. Y. Central, John Geraghty: "You don't have to be a railroad man to know that speed and safety—our watchwords—call for healthy nerves. I smoke plenty. Camels don't jangle my nerves."

PERSONAL SHOPPER Irene Sherwood says: "I guess every woman knows how hectic shopping is. I'm up against all that crowding and noise six days a week. When I'm fatigued, I light up a Camel. It helps me to snap back."

WATCHMAKER I. C. Gorkun says: "Camels? Say, every Camel I smoke seems to be milder, tastier, and more enjoyable than the last one. Camels don't leave me feeling 'smoked out' no matter how many times a day I light one up."

CHAMPION TYPIST Remo Poulsen: "I enjoy Camels from one end of the day to the other. And Camels are so mild, they don't irritate my throat. That means a lot because I smoke a lot. 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!'"

SPORTS WRITER Stuart Cameron: "I know many of America's great athletes intimately. It's mighty impressive how the champions agree on smoking Camels. I'm just as glad as any athlete that Camels don't get on my nerves."

LOVE AND THRILLS IN ROMANCE OF BOSTON

SHEILA, SWEPT AWAY by ardent wooing of Brad Talton, allows him to gather her in his arms for a final kiss before she goes away, intending never to see him again. Brad protests he loves Sheila, wants to marry her. She declares it impossible, gives reasons why people of two different worlds should not wed.

BRAD AND SHEILA, surprised in love scene at Dover mansion, learn from Jane Prentiss, reported engaged to Brad, that Sheila's brother Mickey is in company of Big Gus.

AT THE GARDEN, spectators at the Harvard-McGill hockey game saw Brad Talton and Sheila descending stairs. Cameraman saw the spectators and three, indicated by circles, will receive $5 cash award on calling at the office of the Boston Evening American and identifying themselves. Watch for YOUR photo. Should it appear in a circle on this page, come to the Boston American office, identify yourself and receive $5 for your trouble. Any public gathering may be the scene of one of these camera shots.

the rain-washed night and wondered at its sweetness.

Why was she so disturbed and unhappy? A few headlong kisses . . . surely there was nothing in that to feel so badly about. Then she knew the real trouble was not Brad's kisses, but what they had awakened in her. And, because of that, she burned with sudden and unreasonable anger against him.

"I SUPPOSE," she said, "you get a big kick out of this! Picking up a fool little school-kid like Patsy and turning her head. And then making a bigger fool out of me." She stared out over the balustrade, where the late-rising moon shone dimly on a shrub-bordered pool.

"It's all so easy, too—if you're a Brad Talton. The world is just one big merry-go-round. Pick your ring, and grab it. If you miss it one round, you'll get it on the next. And the saps—well, it's just too bad for them."

Brad fished in the pockets of his dinner coat and found a cigarette. The flash of the lighter showed his face pale and set.

"That's quite an indictment, Sheila," he said quietly. "I guess I deserve it, too—some of it, anyhow. I'm sorry. I'm not exactly a thug at heart. But you're so damned wonderful you make a man forget everything."

Sheila shook her head. There was a vague ache at her heart.

"I don't want to be wonderful that way," she said.

"Oh, I know you can't understand that. Everything's fun with you. Dancing, hiring that band, all this"—she indicated with a vague gesture the enveloping magnificence of Trudy's estate—"it's your life. But it's not mine. Where I live we earn what happiness we get—and it means something when we get it. I like that better than being —more fun for Brad Talton." She sighed.

"I think I'd better go now."

Brad tossed his cigarette away. It described a long arc, and hissed to extinction in the moonlit pool. As Sheila turned toward the tall glass doors, he grasped her by both arms.

"Wait!" he said, and his voice was pleading. "You can't walk out on me like this. I've got things to say."

Sheila looked at him steadily, her eyes luminous as the moon on the water.

"You've already bruised and battered me a good deal," she said, "and I need those arms. I think you'd better find something else to hold onto."

"But you've got to listen," said Brad.

Big Gus Mornick, sinister figure of the Boston underworld, plays a more and more important role in the drama of Sheila Kelly's life. Interested not only in Sheila's brother, Mickey, but more personally in Sheila herself, Mornick already is taking a hand in Sheila's affairs.

Read This First --- Then Go On With the Story

GAY, young, beautiful — that's Sheila Kelly when this story opens. Heart-free, too, except for Attorney Jerry O'Donovan, former B. C. football star, whom she vaguely thinks of as her future husband. But Sheila's glad to have a temporary job at the State House, so she can contribute to the support of her family —Barney, her father, injured in the police strike; Patsy, her pleasure-loving 16-year-old sister; and her mother. She shares her father's ambitions, too, for her brother, Mickey. But Mickey would rather be a pugilist than a lawyer.

In protecting Patsy from the consequences of a "pickup date," Sheila meets Bradford Cabot Talton, Harvard student, and scion of an old and wealthy Beacon street family. Brad seeks to make an easy conquest. But Sheila turns him down cold. Not, however, before Jerry has seen them together.

Though she doesn't know it, Sheila has also attracted the interest of Big Gus Mornick, boss of the Boston rackets, who wants a secret report on racketeering she has transcribed. He assigns one of his torpedos, Greety Koopman, to shadow her, but Greety's methods are crude, and he only gets a beating-up from Jerry.

Meanwhile, the Kelly home acquires two non-paying guests—Delphine Barton, Sheila's older sister, and Delphine's small son, Timmy. Del has parted from her husband, Vincent Barton, of Jamaica Plain. Vince can croon like Bing Crosby, but has a weak spot for blondes and bookies.

The home situation doesn't improve any when Mickey insists on pursuing a pugilistic career in the face of his father's orders. Learning that Mickey intends to appear at the Boston Arena, and that her father knows it, Sheila goes there with Patsy to warn him.

They can't find Mickey, because he is fighting under an alias, but they meet Brad and his sister, Mrs. Trudy Wendell of Dover, his Harvard roommate, Whit Prentiss, and Jane Prentiss, Whit's cousin, society debutante, who thinks she owns Brad, even if he has his doubts.

Charmed by Sheila, Mrs. Wendell asks her and Patsy to join them in ringside seats. Mickey finally appears, too late for Sheila to do anything about it, and knocks out Young Maggio—much to the disgust of Big Gus Mornick, who is also sitting ringside.

Gus, who masquerades as a "sportsman," tries to sign Mickey up to a fight contract, but is balked by Sheila. Later, Sheila, Patsy and Mickey accompany Brad's party to the Towne club, where Brad asks Sheila to the Harvard-Dartmouth game. This conflicts with a date with Jerry for the Boston College-Detroit game but, when Jerry fails to appear on game day, Sheila goes with Brad. After dinner downtown, they wind up at Trudy's Dover mansion, where Brad wins Sheila's sympathy by an earnest profession of love. Angry at Jerry, she lets Brad kiss her, and is surprised to find herself swept away by a gust of emotion.

Now Follow Sheila Kelly Through This Thrilling Serial

Will you?"

"All right. But no more pawing." Listening wouldn't be any use, she knew, but she was glad to have time before returning to the crowded room. She was afraid of what her cheeks and eyes might show.

Brad thrust his hands deep into his pockets and spoke without looking at her.

"YOU'VE taken me pretty well apart, Sheila Kelly. But the main theme, as I get it, is that I'm just another playboy looking for any fun there is around. All right, let's say it's so. Maybe I got a little out of order a while ago. I don't know. You're no soporific, and I'm only human. But there are plenty of girls around who'd think that was pretty tame love-making. Jane, for instance. Or Polly. Nearly any of the girls dancing inside there. And you're a lot more inciting than any of them.

"But skip that. Different girls, different limits. I'm sorry. As for the rest, don't blame me. I don't particularly like this way of living. It know it's largely phony. We drink too much, and we neck too much and we chase around in the same general gang, doing the same things over and over again, and trying to kid ourselves that it's important . . . What I'm getting at is that a fellow gets pretty sick of it . . . Then a real girl like you comes along, and . . . well . . . a fellow can't change his pace in a night."

He turned to her, frowning, his face perplexed and unhappy.

"Damn it, Sheila, I can't have you giving me the gate. I've been thinking about you and dreaming about you ever since that first afternoon. I thought tonight . . . Sheila, don't you get it? I'm nuts about you . . . .

"Dear, I love you!" He smiled suddenly, boyishly, looking neither Harvard nor Beacon street. He placed his hand on her bare shoulder, gently caressing. "Or does that make any difference?"

"Don't!" Sheila knew she was trembling, and she didn't like it. "You said you wouldn't." He took his hand away.

SHE faced him, lips parted, eyes big deep and searching. So he loved her . . . Bradford Talton . . . And how he said it . . . As if it had been forced out of him. She caught her breath sharply, remembering . . . She made her lips scornful. She was growing bitterly wise. "You don't mean that," she accused. "You just mean you'd like to go on—from where we left off."

"Guess again," said Brad, and he was still smiling. "That's all out. I mean exactly what I said. "I love you—right from the bottom of your little feet to the top of your proud little head. Really love. And, while I'm no ball of fire at English definition, I believe the word takes in admire, respect, cherish and a certain willingness to protect. So we can go on from that, if you don't mind, instead of where you said."

"There doesn't seem any place much to go," said Sheila. She tried to think. It was all nonsense, of course—bigger nonsense than had gone before. Probably he was just doing the Harvard thing. Or he'd improved his original edge more than she realized—people did crazy things when they were drinking. She'd felt a little light-headed herself after a single sip of Trudy's punch, just before they came to the sun room. But it was nice to listen to. Then her hard common sense came to her rescue. "Don't be silly, Brad," she said. "I like you for saying it, but"—she stopped, unable to find the words.

"But what?" Brad's eyes held her firmly. "I'm listening."

"OH," Sheila burst out, "you know perfectly well! You're Bradford Talton, Mayflower, Social Register, Harvard and all the rest of it. I'm Sheila Kelly. My father's a former policeman and one of the finest men in all the world; my brother's a garage mechanic; I'm a so-so stenographer. We're just as proud of being Kellys as you are of being a Talton—maybe prouder. But we're—we're just plain different. Take church, for instance. I'll bet you don't go to church twice a year. But I go every Sunday of my life—and so does everybody else in the family. And that's just one thing."

"Nonsense," laughed Brad. "I'm deeply religious, Sheila—especially when I look at you. All that stuff you're talking is medieval bunk. After all, we're living in the United States, and people marry just about as they please."

Sheila shook her pretty head stubbornly. That word "marry." Easy enough to say. But what about Jane Prentiss? Why couldn't he see it? She began to realize that this pleading Brad was harder to fend off than the aggressive one.

"No, Brad, you're wrong. This isn't just the United States. It's Boston. It was Boston before there was any United States. Where the Cabots speak only to Lowells and the Lowells, if they speak to anyone, probably speak to Taltons.

"SO let's not kid ourselves. We've had a crazy, wonderful day and I—I do like you a lot. But that ought to be the end of it. You don't want to go on, Brad, until—we're both hurt."

She went bravely through to the end. But it wasn't easy. Because she realized that this probably was a real good-bye. Brad wasn't the type to waste his time on a hopeless love. But she was sustained by the thought that he would wake next morning and congratulate himself on his narrow escape. Hadn't she seen Mickey crazy about a girl one week and wholly forgetful of her the next? And Brad was so like Mickey—impulsive, selfwilled, more than a little fickle. Attractive, too, just as Brad was, without effort, making a girl feel motherly and fascinated at the same time. It wasn't exactly fair.

Brad was still looking very young—young and hurt.

"Sheila," he said. "I've just had the poisonous thought that you might mean all that baloney. But you don't, do you?"

Sheila didn't answer. What was the use? He'd find out soon enough. She shivered. She had a feeling that dark waters were rising about her ankles—strange and sinister waters, like the brooding pool she had glimpsed in the moonlight.

"Let's dance," she said, desperately. "It seems years since we've danced. Let's."

BRAD halted in the shadow, just beyond the door to the dance-room, through which the light streamed in spattered diamonds.

"Sheila!"

His tone was a detaining caress.

"It's crazy," she said. Well—once, she thought and then—never again. She lifted her lips, soft as rose petals, letting her slim body rest in his arms.

Her fragility, her sweetness, challenged him. She was like beauty itself, alluring, yet always slipping away, always unsubstantial.

And Sheila— Never to see him again—had she meant that? One kiss —only one? It was so easy to say things—so hard always to mean them. Brad. Oh, Brad. Then . . .

A feeling of being no longer alone with him in the protecting darkness, a softly drawn, hissing breath, a rustle of silk and sequins, a point of light stabbing a diamond bracelet. Finally, a vague voice, husky and querulous, drawling:

"Darn it, Brad, isn't it possible to step outdoors without tripping over your rampant libido?" It was Jane.

"Bet that's Miss Kelly! Hello, Sheila! Sheila Kelly! Pretty name. Brad, you're positively shameless. Who do you think you are—Alfred Lunt?"

Brad stiffened.

"Shut up, Jane. You're tight."

"Don't mind me." She made an airy gesture. "I've been having more time too. Lovely people, the Kellys. But I like Mickey best. Well, sorry I have bothered. See you in China."

* * *

SHEILA wrenched herself from Brad's clasp. Scorning his attempt to hide her, she thrust herself past him into the light.

"Just a minute, Miss Prentiss! You said something about my brother."

"I thought it was you," said Jane. She swayed slightly in the doorway, putting out a slender, white arm to steady herself.

Sheila ignored that.

"My brother," she repeated. "Mickey. What about him?"

"He's very nice," said Jane, looking maliciously at Brad. "Wunnerful torsho. Perfect physical specimen. That's more'n you are, Brad. Too bad he has t' go bed so early. He was jus' getting in rest —getting—going good. Then along comes that fool Gus what-do-you-call it an' spoils everything. Practically threw me out. That's how I happened come here."

Only one of the mocking words had really registered with Sheila.

"You mean Big Gus Mornick?"

"Something like that," said Jane. "Moron—Gus—yes, that's right. We were at a club—downtown. Then this Moron—Mornick—came in—gummed the works. Claimed to be Mickey's manager or something. Poor Mickey. Better let me manage him." She put her hand out. "Brad! You come along with me. Get me a drink or something."

Brad hung back. Sheila gave him a push.

* * *

"GO with her!" she whispered fiercely. "Find out where Mickey is. If he's with Big Gus Mornick I want to know where! And hurry!"

Brad shrugged, turned toward the door.

"You ought to be soundly whipped, Jane," he said.

"I know it," she answered. "Whip me."

It was only a minute before Brad was back, but to Sheila, anxious and fearful, it seemed hours.

"I've got it," he said. "Your brother's at some kind of a club on Broadway with your friend Mornick. He's signed a contract with him—or is going to.

Would You Take $5 As Present?

Has your photograph been circled in the Boston American?

All New England is watching the picture pages which appear daily in this newspaper in connection with the serial "When a Cabot Loves a Kelly," which has set the whole town talking.

In addition to the candid camera shots of the principals in this new and thrilling romance, the picture page each day contains an additional feature of practical interest to readers.

Daily in photographs taken at public places, such as the Arena, Thompson's Spa, the Statler ballroom, on Boston streets, certain individuals, unknown to this office, are selected at random, and their faces in the print are circled.

These readers, on visiting the Boston American office and identifying themselves, are presented with $5 each as unofficial members of the supporting cast of "When a Cabot Loves a Kelly."

Watch these pages for YOUR photo. You never know when it may appear with the circle which means a $5 award.

Danger to Mickey Sends Sister To Rescue

Jane came out here in a taxi, and I'm having Bud check back for the address of the club now. By the way, Jane isn't often like that."

"I know," said Sheila. "She loves you. I feel sorry for her. But"—her voice turned scornful—"I'm not going to have her running around after Mickey. If she's got him drunk, too"—she left the threat unfinished.

If Brad thought it amusing that Sheila should resent Jane Prentiss' running after an unknown and penniless young pugilist, he wisely kept it to himself.

"You don't really intend going after him, do you?" he said. "Surely, there's someone you could call."

There was, Sheila thought. One person. Jerry O'Donovan. If Jerry went in after Mickey anywhere he'd come out with him. But—she remembered that wan on Park street. And, if he hadn't liked her going to the Towne Club with Brad, what would he think of tonight?

* * *

BUT, most deterring of all, Brad's kisses were still fresh on her lips. No, she couldn't appeal to Jerry. She was too bewildered, as well as too proud. So she said:

"There's nothing to worry about. I guess I can go anywhere Miss Prentiss can."

She returned to the dance room and presently Bud returned with the wanted address.

"Very useful person, Bud, when you want addresses," said Brad. "I don't know how he does it."

"I tell them I own the taxi company," explained the young Mr. Whiting.

"How do you get away with it?"

"Oh, it's not so hard. When it happens to be true."

"I'll remember that," said Brad, "when the bills come in."

"It won't help you. They even sued me once. You see, I'm only a stockholder."

Brad looked for Sheila. She'd vanished, but a maid soon brought word she was upstairs, changing.

When she came down again Brad was waiting.

"I'm going with you," he said.

What will Sheila encounter in her midnight search for her brother Mickey? Will she be too late to save him from the evil influence of Boston's racket king? And what part will Brad Talton play in the coming drama? Tomorrow's installment of "When a Cabot Loves a Kelly" answers these questions. Read it in the Boston Evening American.

(While some old Beacon Street and South Boston names are used for purely fictitious characters in this story, they refer to no actual persons.)

And Greefy Koopman, "torpedo" for Gus Mornick. A crafty and unscrupulous killer whose drug-crazed mind already holds resentment against Sheila and Jerry O'Donovan, the man who loves her. What form will his enmity against the pretty South Boston girl take when chance arises?

ELSIE ROBINSON, writes from the woman's viewpoint, discusses everyday affairs and problems, regularly in the Boston American.

The loudest "I do" a bride ever spoke!

Even after such throat-taxing scenes, ANN SOTHERN finds Luckies gentle on her throat!

1. "WHEN I FIRST READ the script of the new RKO-Radio picture—'She's Got Everything'," says Ann Sothern, "one scene particularly appealed to me—where the girl gets married on a jolting truck...Well, that scene turned out to be a knockout. But, for me, as the actress...

2. "IT WAS A KNOCKOUT in a different sense! Imagine shouting your 'I do's' above the noise of a truck...and imagine going through such a scene not once, but 30 different times before all the mechanical details were right! Yet, even after this unusual throat strain...

3. "I STILL ENJOYED MY LUCKIES! In fact, Luckies are always gentle to my throat. Others at the RKO-Radio studios agree with me on this—Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall, for example." (Reason: the exclusive "Toasting" process takes out certain throat irritants found in all tobacco.)

4. "NOW AS REGARDS TOBACCO...The flavor of Luckies has always appealed to me so much, I simply concluded they must be made of better tobacco. So I was very much interested to read recently that Luckies are the favorite cigarette with the tobacco experts themselves."

WITH MEN WHO KNOW TOBACCO BEST It's Luckies 2 to 1

5. TOBACCO AUCTIONS MOVE at lightning speed. Auctioneers, buyers, warehousemen and other experts must be able to judge the quality of tobacco at a glance. So here's a fact that speaks volumes...Sworn records show that, among independent tobacco experts, Luckies have over twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes combined. With men who know tobacco best...it's Luckies 2 to 1.

FROZEN FACTS

Conacher Awaits Premier's Approval | Cause of Forum's Unpopularity Out

By BILL GRIMES

Rumors have been current for a few days that Lionel Conacher, the Big Train, would return to the Montreal Maroons. He's now supposed to be waiting for a slight difference in salary to be adjusted.

Bill Grimes

In reality, Connie is holding his breath until he hears from Sir Mitchell Hepburn, premier of the Province of Ontario.

For years, big Connie was Tommy Gorman's ace in the hole. He "fronted" for the loquacious Gorman in New York, until Bill Dwyer caught up with the act, and turned Tommy loose and assigning Conacher as his successor. Tommy brought Connie to Chicago and the Hawks won the Stanley Cup in 1934 but Gorman was let out by Major McLaughlin and bobbed up the next season with the Maroons. Immediately, he started overtures to get Connie to Montreal, succeeded and Maroons took the world's championship title from Chicago.

When Lionel Conacher turned away from hockey and entered politics last spring, the bottom fell out of the Maroons club. Connie was the Maroons, lock, stock and barrel.

Al Lacy Returns As McCoy Second | Vanderbilt Studying R. I. Horse Racing

By JACK CONWAY

AL LACY OF Chelsea, who used to train "Red" Chapman and Jack Sharkey, stepped back into the boxing picture at the Garden last night as one of Al McCoy's handlers . . . Lacy is one of the most able seconds in the boxing game . . . Frankie Genero, Jackie Fields and other boxing greats always wanted Lacy in their corner when they swept into action.

Bill Brennan, McCoy's manager, was also in the New England champion's corner . . . Brennan was unable to work with McCoy in Montreal as a result of being under suspension by the Montreal Athletic Commission at the time . . . Bertys Perry was in charge of Lenglet's corner . . . At 203 ½ pounds Lenglet had a margin of 19 ½ pounds on McCoy, who weighed 184 pounds.

Paul Bowser forgot wrestling long enough to watch the Lenglet-McCoy bout from a press row seat . . . Dan Koons and Peter Carr of the Boxing Commission declared that the large crowd at the Garden bout was proof that interest is picking up in the boxing game . . . The fans were anxious to get a peek at Lenglet in view of the fact he had knocked out McCoy in two rounds in Montreal.

Johnny Buckley dropped down to the press row to state that Freddy Steele, world's middleweight champion, returns to camp with Lou Brouillard in a title bout . . . Steele also has passed up an overweight match with Brouillard . . . It is likely that when Steele risks his title, Fred Apostoli, who knocked him out in New York last week, will be his opponent . . . Buckley saw the Steele-Apostoli tussle, and declared Apostoli proved he is too aggressive and too hard a puncher for the champion.

Dartmouth Sends Derby Greetings

PUG GOLDWAITHE HAROLD PUTNAM GEORGE WALLACE

Dartmouth's great speed skating team has played a major role in the annual Silver Skates Derby of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser since its inception three years ago. Harold Putnam, last year's Big Green captain, continues to be a big Derby booster, now that he's a vice-president of the N. E. S. K. A. Pug Goldwaithe, great Dartmouth champion, is likewise a vice-president. George Wallace of California, was a Dartmouth star when he won the Inaugural Derby back in 1936.

Dartmouth Skating Captain Names Fox Derby Favorite

Putnam Sorry Green Can't Send Big Delegation

By HAROLD B. PUTNAM, JR.
Captain '37 Dartmouth Skating Team
Vice-President, New England Skating Association

HANOVER, N. H., Jan. 11—Announcement that the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser would sponsor the annual New England Silver Skates Derby on Jan. 23 at the Garden comes as a source of much satisfaction to the thousands of New Englanders who annually look forward to this event.

There are those of us who regret that uncertain weather conditions have made it advisable to move the event indoors, thus depriving the thousands who will want to see the affair, but earlier disappointments in attempting to stage the classic on an outdoor surface make the indoor rink the most logical place for the great Derby.

On behalf of the Dartmouth team let me express genuine sorrow at not being able to send a large delegation down for the event. Most of the boys, accustomed to regular outdoor training, find it difficult to race indoors with outdoor skates. So it seems advisable that they forego the Silver Skates this year.

SQUAD UNTESTED

It may be possible that one or two of the boys can buy, borrow or steal a pair of indoor skates in order to make the trip, but no mass onslaught will be possible, such as we hoped for last year.

Captain Ralph Johnston has a large but inexperienced squad this year, but some of the boys should be ready for the Derby by the latter part of the season.

It's a particular source of satisfaction to the directors of the New England Skating Association that the sponsors of this year's Silver Skates Derby have shown such a helpful attitude toward the association.

Skating in New England can never achieve the strength we wish for it without a strong body of registered skaters, and a well-organized group of skating officials.

The action of the sponsors in attempting to bring this about and the helpfulness of the American-Advertiser in furthering the movement is the most significant development in New England skating since we've been connected with the sport.

WALLACE OUT WEST

Now that George Wallace, of Dartmouth, first winner of the Silver Skates, has gone West to add new championships to his speed-skating triumphs, and Leo Lavallee is eliminated from further participation in the meet because of his sensational victory last year, Joe Fox, of the Boston Olympic Skating Club, looms as the man for the senior men skaters to beat.

In view of Fox's high standing in New England skating circles last year, and the regular nightly training he's been doing this year on the Arena surface, it's our guess that he'll be a difficult man to beat. Later in the season we think we know someone who'll come close to turning the trick outdoors, but meanwhile Joe looms as the king of indoor skaters in New England, with only sidelined Leo Lavallee to put up a very close argument.

It's tough to be sidelined at the approach of a Silver Skates meet, and it's a time like this when I can conceive of some sort of a Utopia where one had nothing else to do but train for skating.

But I'll be there rooting for the new Silver Skates champion and the others who learn for the first time the thrill of speed-skating competition.

THE OLD FEELING

It was only two years ago that we found out for the first time we could finish some place near the top in a big race, but it's someone else's thrill now — someone else who'll feel the sting of ice chips in his face, who'll catch his breath and flex his legs for a final drive, who'll watch the soft ice anxiously as his legs tire, who'll smile when it's over and wish he had a chance to race it over again.

It's a great sport, and a great meet!

Good luck!

Director Irving Jaffee, who tonight will personally instruct Silver Skaters in the finer points of speed skating at an informal series of races at Boston Arena, is anxious that no skater of ability be missing from the Derby competition.

Haney See Signs Of Upturn in Near Future

Thinks Low Business Level Reached, Slump Over

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, Jan. 11—The first week of 1938 brought further recession in industrial and business activity. The best weekly indexes fell to the lowest level since 1934.

At the same time reports from all sections indicated growing unemployment and rising relief rolls, which are by far the most serious aspect of the situation. What this country has to fear most is the growth of a permanently demoralized class of government dependents in the form of an army of WPA voters.)

But signs of at least some temporary upturn were not lacking and the low level reached may easily be bottom or close to it. I am inclined to think it significant that the business curve is very close to the levels where it was dropped by the severe slumps from the 1933 and 1934 New Deal blunders. Perhaps this experience is enough in "selling ex-New Deal."

PRICES RALLY

Commodity prices have rallied somewhat of late and a better tone in the security markets is apparent. It seems fair to say that in most lines production has been curtailed sufficiently to bring it considerably below actual current consumption.

The trouble now is that BUYING has been curtailed, even more. Both ultimate consumers and manufacturing consumers as well as merchants, are not ordering. Thus shortages do not become effective.

And back of this lies fear and uncertainty concerning conditions which only government can remove. This fear and uncertainty is not fear by "big business" as such, as by little business and laborers.

Big business can still take care of itself. It is the small merchant who fears failure, and the thrifty working man who fears unemployment. Lack of buying on the part of such average people is an outstanding factor in business today.

Last week, the steel industry rebounded from the usual holiday shutdown. The indications are that it will now be holding at what is just about as low a level as it can go.

REARMAMENT DEMAND

The rearmament demand, however, is bound to bring a considerable demand and particularly naval construction, both for preparation and other purposes.

Automobile production, though down from the abnormal rate of last month is still very low. Building activity is highly mixed and irregular, with reports both of gains, but mainly disappointing.

Except perhaps in Atlanta and Minneapolis territories, where distribution of government money or stronger export demand has helped farmers, retail trade remains backward. Consumers are taking a slow interest in buying.

But wholesale prices averaged higher last week, not only in this country but in England and France. Somehow or other, I can't see wages and prices going down. Maybe this is because the President has gone out of his way to assure "the people" that he will not "let them down."

Urges Capital, Labor Team-Up

Acting Together They Can Do Much to Restore Confidence, Says Banker

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (AP)—Complete recovery from the present recession depends on solution of a number of problems, but already improvement is in sight, James H. Perkins, chairman of the National City Bank of New York, and City Bank Farmers Trust Co., asserted in his report to stockholders today.

He listed as causes of the slump stocking-up of inventories last spring, increased cost of production through taxation and added wage burdens, the ending of inflationary support previously given by the government's deficit financing and "the effect of existing uncertainties in retarding the flow of savings into new industries and private enterprise." He added:

RAPID CORRECTION

"I do not mean to imply, in presenting these difficult problems, that a resumption of the business recovery will await their complete solution. On the contrary, the correction of inventories is proceeding rapidly in many quarters, and it appears that within a short time this cause of recession will be largely removed.

"The pressure of declining volume and profit is inducing other changes in the direction of greater efficiency and lowered costs which are laying the basis for improvement. But I hold that these are key problems, and progress is made toward solving them the business situation will be proportionately improved."

CO-OPERATION URGED

Taking the situation as a whole Perkins said the essential need is for "the cooperative efforts of capital and labor."

"Acting together," he asserted, "they can do much to restore order in the economic organization, re-establish the confidence of the investor, and forestall the demand for legislative actions which are frequently harmful in their effects.

"It has become plain that saving is handicapped by present laws, and in my opinion modification of the undistributed earnings tax and the capital gains tax is desirable. We should bear necessary taxation cheerfully, but taxes should be levied so as to preserve the incentive to saving and enterprise."

LIVING STANDARD

Declaring that the standard of living of the people could be raised only through increasing the efficiency of production and by expanding the industries, he said:

"We must produce more to have more, and distribute the greater production among all groups of the population through lowering costs, in order that prices may be within the reach of all. This is the historical philosophy of this country under which all the great industries in the past hundred years have been built up. We must cling to it if we are to progress."

Due to higher reserve requirements made effective by the Federal Reserve System early in the year and a decline in loans since then, total earning assets of New York banks have dropped since spring, Perkins said. He added that as long as business activity continues depressed the demand for loans and the rate of return will continue low, and that results for 1938 will necessarily depend in great degree on the general situation.

COMBINED EARNINGS

The report disclosed that the combined earnings of the National City Bank and its affiliate, City Bank Farmers Trust Company, for 1937, after customary reserves and depreciation of premises, totaled $11,431,129, equal to $1.84 a share of capital stock. This compared with $12,243,674, or $2.24 a share in 1936.

Pride as Business Thought

Drastic Steps Called For if Things Fail To Get Moving

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The latest attacks on business by political spokesmen have aptly been summed up as the beginnings of a new campaign of hate, but we who follow the markets and business are not so much concerned with such things as we are with the certainty pride calls for some drastic steps to make things move if maligned big business fails political critics.

Thus we already have the spectacle of a strong scale armament program. Much needed no doubt, but surely timed unfortunately for heavy industry. But such things are not likely to prove enough for the economic doctors, so another one will quarrel with history so recently past when princess ups heard of before and a new deal trotted forth for consideration, but put into effect. There is talk of a building program which would be, but is by no means assured. It is not at all unlikely that if things are not working as they should many a small observer says they won't be — will not be too difficult to get control of both the House and a third of the Senate facing fall election, that the thing to do is tinker with the whole system once again. And the very fact big business is being attacked might be profitable to some artificial substitute for the individual initiative and courage that from natural circumstances all the more likely. We would watch the Washington scene for such happenings in particular.

INVENTORIES

If this depression in trade were composed of the normal internal factors usually associated with a decline it would neither be too long or too severe. Freighted out definitely of analyses. Inventories, for instance, a most important factor, are fairly easily broken down, especially with so many leaders on record regarding the condition of their companies. General Robert E. Wood, president of Sears Roebuck & Co., has indicated that his concern has dealt drastically with inventories and that distribution industries should be down to normal in about 90 days. Manufacturing lines are somewhat more lagged, but even they are expected to reach normal by March or April.

Taken as a whole that is not a picture calculated to inspire deep gloom. Goods are not in plentiful supply and it should not be long before orders should be coming in. Some would mean reduced inventories. That would mean employment and more buying and more orders. In other words if given a chance the economic wheels of business would pick up size and momentum. MARKET ACTION

The industrials are doing their part for the cause of higher stock prices, and the rails, while as yet failing to monopolize the headlines, are following along. The difference in their action for the present may be attributed to the varying relationships with the last rally highs. Industrials penetrated the December 21 level yesterday while the rails are still a little short of comparable zone. It is when the latter lift to such a point that our remarks of Monday will be particularly apropos. However, it will not do for a downturn on relatively heavy volume to intervene before the carriers are in the clear. Such action would again spell rally failure.

The stock tape seems to be telling a pretty straight story these days according to the chartists. The groups out front are the same ones that really look best on the graphs. The writer, for instance, finds that the railway aircrafts are by far the best looking individual groups. Steels and coppers are coming up off a poor base. After the next day or possibly before, keep an eye on the oils, with the independents having a slight edge over the standards.

Second Silver Cargo Is Sent Here by China

Coins Shipped Out Of Shanghai When Japs Took City

By ROBERT L. GREEN

There's a strong suspicion in this department that Chinese coin silver is running through Japanese fingers like the quick kind, and with this suspicion a belief that the bland followers of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek have relinquished their grasp on their age old reputation for being "clever" is completely refuted.

The shipment, consigned on November 30 last, when the United States Navy's American Trader brought into this port some 2500 boxes of Chinese silver coin with an estimated value running into the millions of dollars.

The money was consigned to the Federal Reserve bank, in New York City and was shipped from London.

SILVER SHIPPED HERE

The silver was shipped at the time the Japanese were making strong inroads to take over the Shanghai customs, important source of China's Nanking government's chief sources of income.

While the silver is on the Japanese the banks admitted the patrons only 10 per cent of their money, issuing checks for the remainder.

Huge profitable investments were destroyed swallowing up large chunks of native and foreign cash when the Japanese drive was scattered into the Whangpoo and Tangtze rivers by the pounding of the heavy artillery.

However, much cash remained in the ruined banks, earmarked money, etc.

Much of this is of course, conjecture, but it hardly seems likely that the gentlemen of finance would appreciate the auditing of their accounts by the Japanese militarists.

So it follows that some effort must be made to put China's hard money to its medium of exchange in some spot where it might be reasonably safe.

WORTH TWO MILLION

In some way peculiar to rich finance, from out of the east comes the huge money is allowed to immigrate to England and thence to the United States, where it passes as some concrete credit basis for the war blighted Chinese market.

The surprise was registered when the American Farmer, a sister ship of the Trader, arrived here with a Chinese cargo, which is said to be valued at $2,000,000.

Like the previous consignment this shipment was destined for the Federal Reserve bank in New York.

This is the season of the year when you read about the jewel robberies at the winter resorts. It might be added that there are a lot of these robberies that you do not hear about, some of the winter resorts themselves preferring to keep the gilt-edged robberies bad publicity.

These winter resorts seem to think that if it gets noised about that the cash customers are subject to the gilt-edge boys, to the agile second story lads, it would hurt the tourist trade, which appears to be an extraordinarily delicate proposition. Judging from the number of jewel robberies, on the theory that it may serve as a warning to the cash customers and induce them to hide their jewels in some slightly safer place than the top drawer of the bureau.

From the reports of some of the jewel robberies we have read, we gather that the cash customers do not like to put the robbers to too much bother in their search for the valuables.

PERFECT JEM SETTING

As the late Mr. Diamond Jim Brady is said to have remarked when accosted by them, this display of sparklers, "them as has 'em wears 'em" and this is true of the cash customers at the winter resorts, especially the ladies.

A winter resort is a nicer setting for jewels than any other place, and that is why the jewel thieves follow the sun along with society.

The expert jewel thieves are formerly genteel in mode and manner. They wore good clothes and did not put in the high class joints or night clubs.

As a rule, the top-notch jewel thieves are those where they were going, and what they were after when they embarked on an expedition, and they did not just move backyard to into any winter resort and then look around them for spoil.

PLANNED CAREFULLY

They had definite addresses and inventories before they arrived on the scene of their operations, and they laid their time about moving into action.

They were sure-footed house prowlers with a knack of opening strong boxes, if necessary, and on a good big job they knew how to make connections, inside and out-side. It was only in late years that a cruder system was developed by the jewel thieves, based on no facility of foot or hand, and who did not like all the detail that was surrounding the old method.

The new generation does not bother much with mapping plans or studying conditions. The jewel thieves were courteous and considerate enough to wait until the owners of the jewels left for their homes, or hotel apartments, or were sound asleep. They did not like to be disturbed by the police or the social plans of their patients.

We are told this jewel thievery is not what it used to be, anyway. The first thing a jewel thief must have next to the jewels is a reliable "fence," or receiver of the stolen property, and honest "fences" are said to be scarce.

The latest robbery, reported at $50,000 may be all that to the owner, and the insurance company of the owner has insurance, which is quite likely if he has $50,000 worth of jewels, but to the fence it may be no more than a few thousands of dollars. The "fence" does much better, of course, when he gets the stuff broken up for the market.

We do not believe the story of course, but we once heard that a man who was trussed up and gagged along with his wife by a couple of jewel thieves in a Southern winter resort, and left lying on the floor for half a day, forgot to write the boys a note thanking them.

He said he was grateful to them for giving him his first and finest period of silence from his wife in 30 years.

CHICAGO, Jan. 11 (AP)—Mrs. Helen Guiltnane, 33, placed a leash on her pet dog yesterday to take him for a walk. The dog ran around her, twisting the leash about her legs. She fell against a radiator and died of a fractured skull.

Strike Threatens Cuban Sugar Crop

SANTIAGO, Cuba, Jan. 11 (INS)—A serious strike today threatened the Guantanomo sugar crop as 20,000 workers in 10 sugar mills demanded fulfillment of Cuba's prospective labor legislation. The water supply of the U. S. Naval Station here may also be affected.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

TUESDAY, JANUARY 11, 1938

If any man hear my voice and open the door I will come in to him and will sup with him and he with me.—Revelation III., 20.

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Dr. Gordon Brownville, Tremont Temple, Boston. The next text will be suggested by the Rev. George H. Spencer, Episcopal minister, Boston.

The Editor Says:

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will propose in his forthcoming message on national defense a naval program adequate to KEEP AMERICA OUT OF WAR.

The basic features of the program, as International News Service discloses, will be:

Amendment of the Vinson-Trammell Act of 1934, which holds our Navy within the limits of the now non-existent Washington Treaty.

Building of a Navy able to repel an enemy in either the Atlantic or the Pacific—making us, in effect, a TWO NAVY nation.

Immediate construction of five new 35,000-ton battleships, two aircraft carriers and a number of speedy light cruisers.

That will be a PROGRAM OF REALITIES, and it will keep the United States PERMANENTLY a peaceful nation.

OUR DEFENSE PROBLEM

—as the President recognizes, is only in part the result of undoubted international uncertainties.

Mr. Roosevelt is our first President since the World War to RECOGNIZE THE REALITIES about peace and defense.

He is the first to give any substance to American aspirations for peace, deliberately and methodically scuttled by the three Presidents preceding him.

Revision of the Vinson-Trammell Act is wisely made the President's first objective.

Fantastically, while no other signatory nation has kept within the limits of the Washington Treaty, America has never built even close to the limits permitted by that treaty.

WHAT WE REQUIRE

—is a Navy capable of operating against any enemy in either major ocean, regardless of what happens to the Panama Canal.

With anything less than that, we only have HALF A NAVY at best—and NO NAVY AT ALL if any foe puts the American continents between itself and our fleet by blocking the Panama Canal.

The reality of our situation is that we need TWO NAVIES, one in the Pacific and one in the Atlantic, unless we want to leave the fate of the nation at the mercy of a ruthless enemy while our fleet rounds the Horn, as the battleship Oregon was once compelled to do.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S AIM

—in recommending the construction of new ships will be in the direction of permanent security and thus of PERMANENT PEACE.

His expected approval of adequate naval bases on both coasts is in the same direction.

President Roosevelt wants PEACE FOR AMERICA, as we all do.

And he knows that adequate defense offers the only means of MAKING PEACE POSSIBLE, as we all should.

FLOOD CONTROL

—is one of New England's most important problems. It is especially important in the Connecticut and Merrimack river valleys. The disaster of two years ago ought not to be repeated. Dams and reservoirs should be built. There is no question about that.

The only question concerns which government will do the building. Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont and Connecticut have agreed to bear a part of the expense, providing Washington supplies the rest of the money.

Wisely, these States reserved to themselves the right to develop electrical power at the sites of the flood control projects.

But this is not acceptable to the New Deal. President Roosevelt, with the support of the Federal Power Commission, insists that the Government in Washington have all power rights.

Very likely, the matter will now drag along until another disastrous flood occurs. Then officials will shed crocodile tears over the plight of the victims. And millions will be spent for their rehabilitation.

Of course, common sense does say that the millions would be better spent for dams and reservoirs that would make rehabilitation unnecessary. But common sense is often neither wanted nor practised in government.

A NEW TAX LOOMS

—for Massachusetts, and President S. H. Wragg of the Senate is our authority for the statement. Addressing members of the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association, he predicted "some kind of a sales levy would be seriously considered by the Legislature."

President Wragg spoke with a sob in his voice. He said:

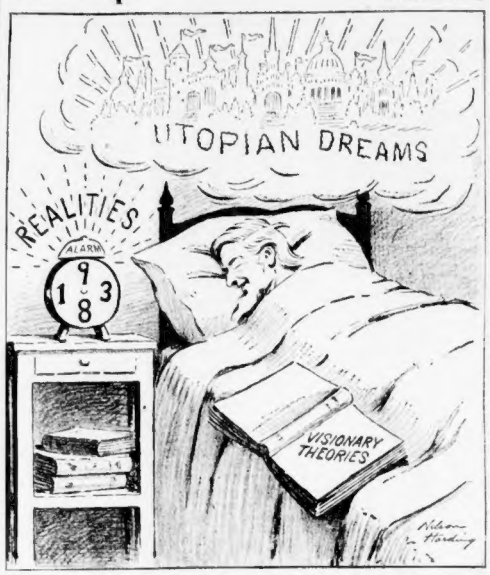
"No one wants a sales tax, but our sources of revenue are exhausted and we must find new sources."

That's probably true, but the real reason why the sources are exhausted is because the State is spending more money than the taxpayers can provide. The cash well has been drained dry.

The big trouble with government in Massachusetts, from the Governor down, is that politicians never think of REDUCING EXPENSES but devote their efforts to finding SOMETHING ELSE TO TAX.

Wake Up!

By Nelson Harding



An "economy of scarcity" will provide a "more abundant life"—

Increasing the national debt is the way to increase the national income—

Surrendering our home markets to foreigners will promote world peace—

Confiscatory taxation and punitive laws will enable industry to pay more and higher wages—

Politicians can run business better than business men can—

Public squandering will restore prosperity.

The foregoing were some of the Utopian Dreams of 1937.

1938 should—will—be a year of hard Realities.

So wake up, Uncle Sam. WAKE UP!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.

ONE of the knotty problems in sociology is the kept man. A recent survey revealed nearly 5000 who live off the earnings of women. The majority reside in the area of the Roaring Forties or in the cross streets of the West Seventies.

Now and then some of them sprout up through the lower social strata to the top soil of Fifth and Park avenue, but mostly they consort on the seamier side. Oddly, there are not many Apollos among them. Rather are they pasty-faced, pinch-cheeked and weasel-eyed.

Bruce Barton in his recent successful campaign for Congress surprised friends, business and political associates with his flair for fraternizing with all classes. A born silk stocking and living in a perfumed area, he was hailed upon as a pink tea candidate. But he shocked all that and was soon hob-nobbing in perfect ease with the news vendors, doormen, truck drivers and the boys around the corner at Jake's.

As a matter of fact, haughtiness is almost a lost gesture. It belonged to another generation. The elder J. P. Morgan had it, while his son perched a circus midget on his knee. The most reserved to all outward appearances of the biggities is probably John D. Rockefeller. He never lets himself go, but is said to be amiable enough upon a firmer acquaintance. Actors of high rank in the old days were unapproachable. Such as John Drew and Richard Mansfield. But there is no longer a high handshake among theatrical or movie stars.

Speaking of haughtiness, I think there is no deflation equalling that recent crack on a radio program when a comic, meeting a puffed-up fellow inquired: "What do you hear from the mob?"

Amiability, however, can be carried too far. Most of us shun the fellow to whom everything is perfectly dandy. Or if we accept him we are likely to cuff him around. My own choice in companionship is for the easy-going fellow, but I like him to freeze up once in a while.

When Abe Erlanger and Marc Klaw were theatrical partners they got along nicely, but if things were too smooth one or the other would kick up a violent row and after a session of desk pounding and exchange of epithets they might for several weeks transact business solely by formal notes. They found such rockings, like the electrical storm, cleared the atmosphere and improved their relationship.

I think it was Somerset Maugham who declared his only objection to pipe smokers was that they were entirely too agreeable. Too full of whimsy.

Pipe smoking, by the way, seems on way to the drawing room. I saw a Tuxedoed diner with his lady light up a well-worn briar at the Colony after coffee the other evening without a frown from ever watchful Gene. Also a house dick at one of the de luxe hotels declares he no longer murmurs a polite disapproval at a pipe user wreathing a few rings in the foyers. Yet I cannot forget our dog Clay who used to crawl under the house when a neighbor used to torch up on his front porch with his corncob in the evening.

Jerry Belcher, the radio interviewer, chivied up the grandest of the Yule heart throbs, to my notion. He was interviewing the head of the returned goods department of a large store in Chicago. Toys are not returnable usually, so when a shabbily dressed, timid woman asked to exchange a doll for the 75 cents purchase price she was gently told the rule.

Something in her manner caught his attention. He asked why she was returning the doll. In almost a whisper she murmured: "We lost our baby."

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

How about some of the "floor and ceiling" protection for tax payers? Goodness knows they need it. Struggling along under the heaviest tax burdens they ever have borne, they face the prospect of still heavier taxes in the future. The public officials they elect to reduce taxes do exactly the opposite.

In his recent message to Congress, President Roosevelt said Congress should "put a floor below which industrial wages shall not fall, and a ceiling beyond which the hours of industrial labor shall not rise." It is more important to establish a "floor" below which the taxpayer shall not fall, and a "ceiling" above which his tax burden shall not rise.

When President Roosevelt was complaining last summer that he was about the only occupant of the White House who never had named a Supreme Court judge, he was hollering before he actually had been hurt. The retirement of Justice Van Devanter gave him a chance to select one judge. Now the retirement of Justice Sutherland enables him to pick another. There is an unusual amount of speculation over who will be picked for this latest Supreme Court vacancy. Will there be another surprise appointment like that of Senator Black? If the Senate learned anything from the public in the country is a mystery.

criticism which followed the Black appointment, it will make a thorough investigation before it confirms the President's next choice of a Supreme Court judge.

After reading the budget message, it is surprising to hear that President Roosevelt is talking on the government and business getting together in an attempt to so plan industrial production as to prevent overproduction.

How an Administration which confesses it cannot even plan its own business, with any degree of accuracy, can even hope to make plans for all the private business ing on the country is a mystery.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

ARCHAEOLOGISTS seem to be always croaking. "That's old stuff." Just now they are displaying at Athens pottery election ballots of 2,500 years ago, with evidence to show that they were stuffed into the ballot box to defeat Themistocles, among others.

The new excavations at Pompeii, revealing election posters in which the voters were urged to "drive the gang out of the city hall," are one of many revelations that, under the rule of king or demos, the human side of the news always has been pretty much the same.

One can find satisfaction or sorrow in all this, according to his habits of thinking, or possibly his digestion. You may be pleased to meditate that man today is now no worse than he ever was, and that civilization has gone on in spite of his innate villainies and cruelties. Or you may be saddened with the thought that the age-long efforts in popular government haven't eliminated even such crude and primitive shenanigans as stealing elections.

This year gets into its stride with new and fervent invocations of peace. War and the fear of war have become a planetary menace. There is a new world profession of belief, a new and fervid aspiration for a peaceful world order—but no formulas, no "happy issue out of our afflictions." That, too, is an old, old story.

The first Briand-Kellogg peace pact, renouncing war as an instrument of policy, was written and signed in the year 1280 B. C. between the Egyptian Rameses and Hattushilish, the King of the Hittites.

Possibly it was that that inspired the old song, "In the days of old Rameses, that story had parents." It is the only ancient peace treaty extant, now in the British Museum, I believe.

They had been fighting for four or five hundred years before that, and were fighting again immediately thereafter—but not with each other. A sort of battle-royal developed in those parts, and each was busy with new aggressors. These were dominant world powers then. Their peace treaty came to nothing.

I'm not cynical and I don't think the foregoing is as gloomy as it might appear to be. The New Year marks something new in the world, something quite possibly more hopeful than all the dickerings of war lords and diplomats from the beginning of time.

That is the establishment of the new "World Court of Knowledge," at the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Indianapolis a few days ago.

Mobilizing the great scientists in all the free countries of the world, they propose to piece together and make available for a rational world order the intellectual and spiritual harvest of the centuries, for peace and enlightenment, against war and discord and the advancing legions of chaos, they exalt free inquiry and free democracy, and they oppose the assault of the new tyrannies of dictatorship and regimentation. They enunciate a new faith in the liberated mind of man.

Don't shrug this off without getting a transcript of those Indianapolis proceedings and reading it carefully. Don't think for a moment that it's just so much more professorial moonshine. There are vast, powerful, tangible human forces focused in this scientific pronunciamento.

Personally, I regard it as a magnificent rallying cry against all the specters and chimeras and hobgoblins that crowd in on us today.

March of Events

By Benjamin DeCasseres

THE Japanese character as revealed in the Sino-Japanese war, contains one of the greatest contradictions in the history of peoples.

Here is a nation that has in the last 75 years developed a perfect passion for all the arts, sciences and philosophies of the Western world.

Japan turned its back on its own so-called "culture" and became "Western" almost overnight.

For sheer barbarity Japan's war in China, from any angle, can find a parallel only among the ancients.

The solution of the paradox is found in the fact that Japan's "civilization," so called, is purely artificial, purely manufactured.

Underneath, there lies the real Japanese, a ruthless Malayan savage. Which reminds me of the warning that Pierre Loti, captain in the French Navy and world-famous novelist, gave to the Western world after the Russo-Japanese war:

"Beware," he said, "of a monkey with a bomb!"

Mr. Dooley, the famous creation of the late Finley Peter Dunne, was generally smashingly right, but he made one mistake when he said:

"Th' Supreme Court follows th' iliction returns."

If it ever did descend to that procedure it would be violating in spirit the Constitution, which has nothing to say about the Supreme Court bowing to the will of the majority.

Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania, recently pointed out that it is erroneous to suppose that merely because "a vast majority approves a certain law the Supreme Court must ratify it."

The Supreme Court was created to pronounce a law constitutional or unconstitutional irrespective of election returns, majorities or minorities.

When the court follows the election returns it will become a rubber stamp. I do not think that day is here yet.

I've been reading about dynamite.

Almost all of us think of dynamite as purely destructive. As a matter of fact, it is CONSTRUCTIVE. The Institute of Makers of Explosions in an informative bulletin deny that dynamite comes under the head of war munitions.

Dynamite cannot be used in shells, rifles, or cannons. It it purely an "industrial explosive," according to the institute.

It is CONSTRUCTIVE in the sense that it is employed in mining, drainage of wet lands, blasting stumps and boulders, deepening harbors, hollowing foundations for our skyscrapers and building highways.

The first dynamite blast was set off in San Francisco in 1867. Of course, dynamite has been used since by gangsters, irresponsible labor unions, Communists and Anarchists. And even the Institute admits that nitroglycerine, the most powerful explosive ever made by man, "is a component of many dynamites."

All of which proves that a thing may be either good or bad—it depends what you do with it.

The Soviet crackpots have now taken a decided and definite turn for the worse mentally.

The chairman of the Astronomical Council of Leningrad has been found "Trotskyizing" the stars. He has been fired. "Monkeying with the observatory," "turning in false reports" are some of the charges.

Further details of this interesting celestial "purge" are lacking, but alienists can now make a fair guess as to just how far the ravages of Communist paranoia have gone.

The Political Parade

By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.

THOSE in Congress who are fighting to stem the advancing tide of bureaucracy found little to encourage them in the President's budget message.

Bureaucracy is clinging with grim determination to every foothold it has gained.

For example, here is the first of this season's crop of the great supply bills, making appropriations for the independent offices of the Government.

Appropriations under this title have gone up from $617,000,000, in 1935, to $1,571,000,000 for the fiscal year 1939. Part of this vast increase is due to the inclusion for the first time of T.V.A. and C.C.C. in this bill, but part of it is due to the expanding force of self-fed bureaucracy.

This bill for next year shows a reduction of $186,000,000 in the three items of Railroad Retirement, Veterans' Administration, and C.C.C., as compared with the current appropriation.

But the total reduction in the bill over the 1938 appropriation is only $122,000,000.

Delve pi emical into this vast compendium of expenditures, and you will discover that in the shuffle $641,000,000 has been lost. So far as best authorities at the Capitol can figure out, this very largely represents, under this bill alone, the increased cost of bureaucracy.

The overhead is going up, when it ought to be coming down.

The average member of the House can't figure out the proposed cut in C.C.C., for the fiscal year 1939, of $124,000,000.

To the average statesman it doesn't make sense.

For five years House members have been aided in coming back by Federal expenditure.

The whisper goes around the Capitol that a little later on this year this item for the C.C.C. will come back as a supplementary estimate, the money, however, to be spent for C.C.C. by the relief set-up of Harry Hopkins.

It doesn't fit in with the economy drive, if you can call it that, but it is being taken as the correct "dope" at the House. We shall see, later on.

The election of Representative Lister Hill, to the Senate, over Tom Heflin, pathetically trying to stage a come-back, will not change any votes in favor of the Wages and Hours Bill in the Alabama delegation. All but Hill and Speaker Bankhead, in that delegation, turned thumbs down on the Administration's pet measure at the special session.

If Heflin, who opposed the Wages and Hours Bill, had been elected, it would have been of tremendous political significance. As it was the other way around, it is unimportant.

The small vote cast, about 128,000, showed that the people weren't interested.

Fewer than 24 per cent of the electorate in Alabama bothered to vote.
